

SGA A-Go-Go

by Barb Roy

The Student Government Association (SGA) announced at last Tuesday's meeting that they would be instituting a new policy that returns to issues of the 1970's.

"The issues of today are boring," said Shawn Limerich, President of the SGA. "We decided to explore the issues of another era. That way we can change the outcome of what was decided then, and thereby alter history."

Not only will the actual rhetoric of that era be invoked, but members will now be required to also dress the part.

"We believe that it will be vital to our mission to have members who fit into the criteria that we will be setting," explained a junior senator who declined to be identified but who writes for the Capital Times newspaper. "We have spent the past few months growing long sideburns, learning old slang like, 'groovy,' and scouting vintage stores for wide ties and go-go boots."

The option was left up to individuals as to which of these choices they would make; some girls going with the ties or sideburns, while some guys chose the go-go boots.

In particular, students are eager to reinstate the ritual of the Roundtable. This is where tough issues like whether dope should be banned to outdoor-smoking areas only are decided while passing around the SGA bong.

There is some controversy among members, however. One senior senator threatened to quit, saying she drew the line at the incense burning.

"I wanted to go with a more late-70's disco thing," said Judy Gotcha, Vice President. "We could turn it into a fundraiser if we turned on the strobes and hung up the disco ball. I think that people on campus are rife for a hustle revival. I have an alternate proposal to turn the Gallery Lounge into Gallery 56."

The following is an example of the type of event that the SGA has in mind for its new policies. Look for a competing concert on the front lawn of Olmstead the day of WPSH Springfest on April 28. This will be a warm-up to test the accoustics in preparation for quality performers at PSH, such as the upcoming Bolton concert, and perhaps Emmy Lou Harris will return. The key phrase is: "Capitol Campus finally may be getting it together."

"It's really worth all the time and effort," said Perez, a first-year participant. "But it's more fun just to be here and compete against all these really intelligent schools."

"I think the most exciting part is seeing the intensity in their eyes and the amount of time they devote to study and prepare for it," Cornish said.
