Dear Jack and Jill,

I am a cross-dressing cycle-gang leader. I am a supplier of drugs to the Amish. I just hooked up with my girlfriend's brother's wife, but I actually like her brother better. Or maybe her dog. But anyway, when I get invited to barn raisings, what do you think goes better with black leather; my steel-toe high heels or the more demure patent leather work boots and also, should I wear gold or silver chains?

-Unsure

Jill:

Um, the high heels sound nice and I would stick with silver, unless you opt for brown leather occasionally, then definitely go with gold. And oh, yeah, go with the dog.

Jack:

What kind of hog you drivin'? What kind of drugs you sellin'? What kind of dog is it? You don't give me enough details to answer your questions, so I can't help your pathetic little problem.

Two Capital Times staffers fired over scandal

Involves alien abduction and use of probes

By Barb Roy

Dan Zehr and Matt Bowman, who have been the editors of the Capital Times since last spring, are headed separate directions after finally graduating Bowman plans to receive his degree in Communications from Penn State Harrisburg this May, while Zehr plans to leave the country as soon as he can pass English 101, a basic requirement course in the freshman year.

"Somehow, he's been passed through the system without this being noticed, which is suspicious of an insider conspiracy. It certainly is not the fault of our streamlined computer services, because in our attempt be fiscally suave, no one should actually be dealing with real human beings to get anything accomplished within the Penn State realm," said Dr. Graham Spanier, President of Penn State University. "The buck stops now for Mr. Zehr, however. He absolutely cannot have his degree until he returns to wherever he came from and passes this simple, elemental course."

Although reluctant to admit the fact of his failing, Zehr had a defensive response. "It weren't my fault, he said. "I forgot to use the spell-checker on a couple of papers."

If he is successful in another attempt to pass English 101, he plans to attend Grad school in the Arabian republic of Yemen. "It's been a semester-long dream to attend Yemen U," said Zehr. "I've been carefully following happenings there from the UP (United Press) wire. Its warmer and I'll get to own my own Uzi. It's standard for all students to carry one."

His scholastic plans are to study textile design, while his second choice is to herd sheep in Uzbekistan.

After he receives his degree, Bowman plans to head south to Florida to develop a career as a professional amateur golfer. "I would like to be the best amateur golfer on the miniature golf circuit," he said. "I will be the greatest amateur golfer. I will be a professional at it."

He plans to train a couple of little junior golfers, as well. "I am getting married. I love kids. We plan to have ten of them; surely one out of the ten will be the next Tiger Woods. I figure its like throwing mud on the wall to see what sticks. Did I tell you I was getting married?"

The staff of the Capital Times has mixed feelings about their departure.

"I will finally get to hoard the desks and personalize the computers in the (Capital Times) office," said an unidentified staffer. "I wonder how much is in the budget that we can party with?"
