What are your plans for Y2K?

Actually, I am determined to not let myself get hyped up about Y2K. I have no idea what's going to happen come midnight on Dec. 31 but I'll be with friends and family in New York, just like every year before this. We are taking plenty of extra gas with us, though – just in case.

I'm going to invest all my money in generators and frozen foods, then run up a huge credit card bill in the hopes that all the records are wiped clean at midnight. No, really, I'll probably just end up crushed together with my friends drinking screw-top champagne and singing Prince. Rock on!

My plans are to spend the New Year with that special someone and then to proceed to party the rest of the night.

I plan to attend church and bring in the new year thanking God that we all made it this far.
