PSH STUDENT GIVES A DUCK ABOUT ANIMAL RIGHTS

Sacrifices valuable sports memorabilia in daring rescue

Ducks, they're man's best friend. And this weekend, a man became a duck's best friend. What brought these two together, hand-in-feather? A heroic rescue.

Vid Lynch describes the scene. "I was just walking around in the afternoon that day, setting the elements of the periodic table to song in my head, when all of a sudden I heard this barking," he said. He sprinted around the corner to behold a horrific sight.

"I turned the corner and saw a duck, hanging from a window. I noticed that one of its four legs and its tail were caught in a window fan," Vid said. Duckily, our hero was prepared for such a situation.

"I watch 'Animal Cops' on Animal Planet religiously," he said. "You just never know when a furry, black and white, four-legged duck with a tail will get caught in a window fan, you have to be on your toes!"

"... I was just walking around in the afternoon that day, setting the elements of the periodic table to song in my head, when all of a sudden I heard this barking..."

And Vid was. He knew enough to bring his autographed 1965 Harmon Killebrew Louisville Slugger bat with him on his walk that day. In a quickly thought-out move, Vid tossed the bat javelin-style into the window fan, effectively stopping it.

"It was nothing short of a miracle. Sure, some splinters flew, and the bat is worth a lot," he said. "But even Harmon Killebrew would agree, the life of that furry, playful duck is worth far more than a piece of lumber."

The duck was scared and in pain, and at first resisted the rescue attempt. But Vid sang a moving rendition of Madonna's "Lucky Star" to soothe the savage beast, and was able to gently pry him free.

The duck hobbled home happily with Vid. "I could say I was just in the right place at the right time, but I think it was destiny," Vid said, his eyes misting up. "Not only did I make a rescue (sniff), I made a friend."

And may they live quackily ever after.
