

Is Reality TV for real? Did you know the best way to find your future husband/wife is to let the American public choose one for you without you even knowing the person or what he or she looks like? The American public can't make up their minds about invading Iraq, nevertheless someone is allowing their future to be decided by the same indecisive individuals! How about telling a bunch of women/men that you are a millionaire, choosing the one that sucks up to your fake a$$ the best, and marrying that person?

Reality TV is a sign of the times that displays America's dissolving moral culture. We are setting the example to future generations that this type of emotional and personal degradation is acceptable. If people fail at such personal endeavors, what will happen with those that extend to their professional career? Will they think twice about such?

Entertainment such as this is filth that dims enlightened minds and will only lead to further public acceptance of immoral behavior.
