Women's History Month

Wednesday, March 31, and Thursday, April 1 with "Women in Society: Current Issues and Topics," seven events over two days and related exhibits throughout the campus. All events are free, and the community is welcome. Refreshments will be served at each event.

The first event, on Wednesday, March 31, from 11 a.m. to 12:15 p.m. in the Morrison Gallery of the Library, is "Women, Culture, and Spirituality: The Sights and Sounds of Reclaiming a Sacred Face," discussion of results of a research study of 22 women of different cultural groups who draw on their spirituality in teaching and learning about culture, diversity and equity issues.

The first event on Thursday, April 1, is a panel discussion in the Morrison Gallery of the Library on "Women in the Media." Panelists Donna Kirker Morgan of WHP-TV, Judy Hricak of Gannett Fleming, Inc., Nancy Sacunas of Sacunas and Saline, Pat Gadsden of Life-Esteem, and moderator Assistant Professor Catherine Rios, will address challenges and opportunities for women in the media field today.

Concurrent with the "Women in the Media" event is "Women and Wellness" in the Olmsted Building's Gallery Lounge, from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. Multiple information, screening, and hands-on application stations include blood pressure, bone density, body fat, and stress screenings, massage therapy, eating tips and samples, and health/wellness educational materials. Door prizes will also be given out.

Also concurrent is a safety and awareness program, "No Victims Here," sponsored by Safety and Police Services, with information stations on how to best avoid victimization and to help survivors. Stations will include: Harassment, Acquaintance Rape, Sexual Assault, and Domestic Violence. A Video loop of "Domestic Violence, A Homicide Case Study" will run.

"Voices and Votes," a one-act play by Dr Dorothy King will be performed on Thursday, April 1, from 5-5:45 p.m. in the Special Events Room of the Food Court in Olmsted.

The last event of the series, "Women Stereotyping Women," visual presentations and original source research findings, will be presented by Associate Professor Holly Angelique and Assistant Professor Ken Kyle on April 1 from 6 to 7:15 p.m. in the Morrison Gallery of the Library.
