editor's comments

OK, Penn State Harrisburg. Here's what producing this issue was like in a nutshell:

It may be the first issue of the Spring 2009 semester, but after an exhausting fall semester of revamping the paper, putting in our best effort every time, long and stressful nights in the office, having our paper shut down and getting our paper back up and running, this whole newspaper production thing isn't new or refreshing to us.

The only refreshing thing are the new writers -- the new faces and new bylines. New recruits are exciting. But with recruiting comes training and that takes much dedication, encouragement and patience.

This is issue No. 7, and by now, us editors have gone nuts.
