National Black Feminist Organization (NBFO)

Formed in the 1970s by Margaret Sloan and Jane Galvin Lewis, the National Black Feminist Organization (NBFO) served as a political, spiritual, and community building structure for African-American women who felt marginalized by society and shut out of the Civil Rights Movement. It provided an environment in which Black women could marshal forces with other organizations to push for the rights denied them. It also helped to create an opportunity for honest and open dialogue between women and men. Join us on Thursday, March 25. Panel Discussion with members of the NBFO: 2-3:15 p.m. Gallery Lounge, light refreshments provided.
