Rebel Cavalry.—Captain Totten, of the United States Artillery, describing the regiment of cavalry which attacked his position at Springfield, says: "The enemy tried to overwhelm us by an attack of some eight hundred cavalry, which, unobserved, had formed below the crest of the hill to our right and rear. Fortunately, some of our infantry companies (and a few pieces of artillery from my battery) were in position to meet this demonstration, and drove off this cavalry with ease. This was the only demonstration made by their cavalry, and it was so effete and ineffectual in its force and character as to deserve only the appellation of child's play. Their cavalry is utterly worthless on the battle field."

The Rebels at Bull Run .- A correspondent of the Tribune, after examining the Southern news, estimates that the rebel force at Bull Run was 48, 000, exclusive of the regiments in which there were no killed and wounded reported, Johnston's reinforcements, reserves at Manassas, and the artillery forces in the batteries.

sence of Federal soldiers is the signal in almost every quarter of the State of Missouri for movements of men in sympathy with the rebellion. On the 28th of August, $100,000, which had been sent from Fayette to the Allen depot, on the Northern Missouri R. R., on their way to St. Louis for safe keeping, were seized and carried off by a party of secessionists. The money has since been recovered, but the state of things is so disturbed, that Gen. Fremont has been obliged to proclaim martial law over the whole State, so far as occupied by his forces. The proclamation, which was issued August 30th, says:—
The lines of the army of occupation in this State, are, for the present, declared to extend from Leavenworth, by way of the posts of Jefferson City, Rolla, and Ironton, to Cape Girardeau, on the Mississippi All persons who shall be taken with arms in their

The Hatteras Victory.—General Butler and Commodore Stringham have together achieved a signal triumph in the capture of the two forts on Hat teras inlet, for which they sailed on the 26th of August. These forts were manned by no less than 715 men, defended by thirty-one pieces of artillery, some -personage than the renegade Samuel Barron, one o the numerous traitors from our own navy. He holds, under Jeff. He says:—"As I have before remarked, this inlet is the key to the Albemarle Sound, and it cannot be too strictly guarded We certainly are under the espionage of the steamers, as they are seen every day or two in the offing, although they keep without the range of our guos. Facts and Opinions. Gen. Lyon's Death not in Vain.—Let it not be said his life was thrown away. The battle of Wilson's Creek was the turning point in the war in Missouri. From it we may date the decline of Jackson's revolt, and the wane of the invasion. The invaders will not again have such a chance as they had there of securing a great triumph, because they will not again have the advantage of such odds in their favor. Henceforth they will be met at every point with forces equal to their own, and, unable to advance, they will be compelled to retire to their own soil, to await an attack upon their own strongholds. -St.

The British Consul at Charleston.-Excellent grounds exist, according to the World, for questioning the neutrality of this functionary in his intercourse with the rebels. Letters found on the person of the rebel agent, Muir, captured when about to sail for Europe on board the Africa, represent the Consul, who is named Bunce, as having communicated, on oath of secresy to an individual in Charleston the fact that the first step to recognition had been taken by the British government, as having joined with the French Consul in the same city, in sending a messenger to Richmond "to ask Jeff. Davis, President, to accept the treaty of commerce, to accept the neutral flag carrying neutral goods," and as employing a rabid, active secessionist to make up the commerce is reports which he forwards to his government. Extracts from the private correspondence of a recent emigrant to Charleston from England have appeared in the London Press, which are full of violence against the United States government, and express hopeful confidence in the speedy success of the rebellion. The writer says: "Nothing but armed confusion has surrounded us on every side for the last six months, and I did not think it very safe to write you Hanover St. Ch. Inf. The Best Marksmen,-Surgeon Lewis, of the Second Wisconsin regiment, released on parole by the rebels, is reported, in the Detroit Advertiser, as asserting that all Federal surgeons who fell into the hands of the rebels, are united in the opinion that liers are much the best marksmen, both with musket and cannon. The loss of the rebels could not have been less than double that of ours, while the wounds sustained by them were much more severe. But few of our men were wounded in the body, the legs and arms seeming to have been the enemy's

The Union Men of the South.—The Washington correspondent of the COMMERCIAL ADVERTISER has had a conversation with Mr. Maynard, elected to Congress from East Tennessee, who, more fortunate than his colleague, Mr. Nelson, has escaped capture and imprisonment by the Confederates, as a traitor, and reached Washington in safety.
