

The Family Circle.

The Dying Wife.

BY MRS. EVANS, SISTER OF REV. T. H. STOCKTON.

WEEP not, beloved, that I pass before thee...

And now that this frail form in death grows colder...

For oh, were not His heart my soul entwining...

But now I die, and yet my soul rejoices...

For oh! if they all their towering splendor...

Ab, yes, in danger ever hovering o'er thee...

There, never more shall come like this distress us...

ACTING A LIE.

Mrs. HANSON went away one afternoon...

Presently she heard the voice of her little playmate...

When Mrs. Hanson came in Helen was still sitting...

"Yes, mamma," said the little girl.

"Then you have not served any?"

"No, mamma."

"I am sorry, for I wanted very much you should finish both to-night..."

Helen blushed still deeper as she felt how unworthy she was of her mother's words...

When Mrs. Hanson came in Helen was still sitting by the crib...

"Has baby been good, Helen?"

"Yes, mamma, and I rocked her to sleep again."

"And how have you got along with your lesson?"

Helen colored, as she answered, "It seems real hard, mamma, and I have not got it perfectly yet."

"Then you have not served any?"

"No, mamma."

"I am sorry, for I wanted very much you should finish both to-night..."

Helen blushed still deeper as she felt how unworthy she was of her mother's words...

When Mrs. Hanson came in Helen was still sitting by the crib...

"Has baby been good, Helen?"

"Yes, mamma, and I rocked her to sleep again."

"And how have you got along with your lesson?"

Helen colored, as she answered, "It seems real hard, mamma, and I have not got it perfectly yet."

"Then you have not served any?"

"No, mamma."

"I am sorry, for I wanted very much you should finish both to-night..."

"I did not mean to, mamma, I know I didn't; but I forgot."

Mrs. Hanson felt very much grieved. She had confided in her daughter, and had been deceived, and her heart felt very sorry.

"I only meant to be gone a minute, mamma, and baby was so fast asleep, I thought she would not waken till I got back."

"You did wrong to leave her at all, Helen, when I had charged you so particularly not to; but after you had disobeyed, you should have told me at once when I came in, that I might have attended to these bruises, for I fear Abbie is badly hurt;" and she stroked very lovingly the little head that was turned so restlessly from one side to the other.

"Do you think baby will really be sick for this, mamma?" asked Helen, in a distressed tone of voice, for she dearly loved her baby sister.

"I cannot tell," said Mrs. Hanson. "I hope not, but it may have proved something very serious, had I not discovered it in time."

Helen went to bed with a heavy heart, and as she knelt to say her prayers she asked more earnestly than ever before that she might be forgiven, and kept from doing so again; and then she asked God to make the little sick one well. Her first thoughts in the morning were of Abbie, and jumping out of bed, she went silently to her mother's room, where the night-lamp was burning very dimly.

Mrs. Hanson had not addressed through the night, and as Helen went in she sat bending over the little sleeper. Helen felt as if her heart would burst, as she asked how baby was. How she trembled, and feared to hear the answer, and how relieved did she feel when her mother told her Abbie was sleeping more quietly, and that the slight moisture on her forehead told that the danger which had threatened her little pet had passed away, though she was very weak, and would not be quite well for days to come.

How thankful did Helen feel to her kind Heavenly Father, and oh, how did the lesson sink into her heart, and make her pray every day that she might never, never again be left to act a lie!

CAST THY BURDEN UPON THE LORD.

DR. PARSON, when racked with pain, and near unto death, exclaimed: "Oh, what a blessed thing it is to lose one's will. Since I have lost my will I have found my happiness! There can be no such thing as disappointment to me, for I have no desire but that God's will may be accomplished."

NAPOLEON'S IDEA OF MAKING WAR.

The following letter was written by Napoleon to Angereau, on the 21st February, 1814:

"What! Six hours after receiving the first troops from Spain you are not in the field! Six hours of rest is quite enough for them. I considered at Fungis with the brigade of dragons coming from Spain, you say that the six battalions from Nimes want clothes and equipment, and are untrained! Angereau, with miserable excuses! I have destroyed 80,000 enemies with battalions of conscripts, scarcely clothed, and without cartridge boxes."

The National Guards are pitiful. I have here 4000 from Angers and Bretagne, in round hats, without cartridge boxes, but with good weapons; and I have made them tell. There is no money, do you say? But where do you expect to get money, but from the pockets of the enemy? You have no means? See them! You have no magazines? Tut, tut, this is too ridiculous. I order you to put yourself in the field twelve hours after you receive this letter. If you are still the Angereau of Castiglione, keep your command. If your sixty years are too much for you, relinquish it to the oldest of your general officers. The country is menaced and in danger. It can be saved by daring and activity, and not by vain delays. You must have a nucleus of 6000 picked troops. I have not so many, yet I have destroyed three armies, captured 40,000 prisoners, taken 200 pieces of artillery, and thrice saved the capital. The enemy are in full flight upon Troyes! Be before them. Act no longer as of late. Resume the method and spirit of '93. When Frenchmen see your plume waving in the van, and you, first of all, exposed to the enemy's fire, you will do with them whatever you will."

THE JEALOUSY OF A DOG.

Some time since, a gentleman living on the Hudson, had a Newfoundland dog, who was a great favorite with the family. When this dog was confined in the yard, a pet lamb was given to one of the children, which seemed to be a novelty even to railroad men. It was the coal-burner, Hacksack, a miniature specimen of a locomotive and tender combined. It has but one driving wheel on a side, and is capable of carrying fifty miles an hour, with a light train of coal.

It belongs to the New York and Erie Railroad, was built, we believe, by the engineer, Mr. Mumford, and is used by Superintendent Minot in going over the road in performance of his duties."

TELEGRAPHY ON WAR SHIPS.—The London Post states that an iron-clad elevated tower is built on the after deck of the Warrior, and fitted with telegraphic apparatus, communicating with the engine-room and all the apartments of the vessel. In this room the commander witnesses in comparative safety all that is going on, and sends his orders with lightning speed to any part of the ship.
