The Day of the Lord.

"O earth, earth, earth, hear the word of the Lord."
—Jer. xxii. 29.

FROM THE LATIN. GIVE ear, O earth, give ear! Depths of the mighty sea! Give ear, O man! Give ear, All 'neath the sun that be !

The day of wrath draws near, The dreadful day of doom; The sinner's bitter day, It maketh haste to come

Then shall these ancient skies Roll up and pass away: The sun shall blush, and hide Its face in dread dismay.

The moon shall change and flee; The noon grow dark as night The stars shall fall to earth In wild and sore affright.

Alas! alas! alas! To whom, in that great day, Shall the sad sinners flee, On whom for refuge stay?

Lost, lost, for ever lost! Too late ! too late ! he cries ; Lost, lost, for ever lost! The second death he dies.

O Jesus, save and bless. O Son of God on high: Then safe in Thee we live, And safe in Thee we die.

Safe to the holy hills, Safe to the city blest; Safe from the toil below, Thou leadest to thy rest -Dr. Bonar.

LAZY STEPHEN.

BOOKS were distributed, scholars commenced their studies, but Grace took no more notice of Stephen Wright, and perceived that he occupied himself in catching flies and pulling off their wings, and in tormenting scholars who sat near him. Two little boys complained that he had stuck pins in his boot, and was constantly pricking them; another complained that he had stuck pins in the bench; all kinds of tricks were played by him s and, when he was tired, he laid his head down upon the desk and went sound asleep

Grace proceeded hopefully with the rest a few sullen spirits at first refused obedience but when they found that the spirit of the school was with the new teacher, they became ashamed, and, one by one, laid down their weapons of rebellion. She walked among them with such a self-reliant manner, and was so fully prepared to teach what she professed, that a feeling of respect was rapidly expelling the demon of insubordination. But Grace had not forgotten Stephen: when recess arrived, she seated herself by his side. He had just awoke with a yawn, and was stretching out his limbs and arousing himself for play. The wise young teacher was determined to thaw the ice; but not a word about books, studies or school was to be broached that day. She had made up her mind that all such propositions should come

When the time came for closing school, Grace called upon Stephen to fasten the windows for her, and to do other little offices which might enlist his kindly she had a soul. She looked up into his face when he got home to think how much conversation had passed between himself and the agreeable young teacher, more than had ever occurred with all the others taken together. Grace was convinced that there was an avenue by which she could reach this hard nature, and awaken his dormant faculties, that she was sure lay sleeping there, for the boy exhibited close observation in the remarks which he had made upon subjects with which he was familiar.

Next morning, after the classes were organized, Stephen stepped forward, and said, rather sheepishly, "I would rather do something than sit here idle; will you please give me some books?"

Grace quietly handed them; she had hoped that the other boys had not observed him, for she felt that this was a critical moment. Unfortunately, John Dunstan had been watching the proceedings.

"Holloa I say, Steve, you're knuckling down, are you, to a woman? I thought you had more pluck; but I don't believe in you; you're only acting." Stephen, in a rage, threw the books across the room, returned to his sullen mood, exclaiming, "I said it was no use; this is the way I've alway been taunted, boys making fun of me, and teachers abusing me!" Grace was grieved, but she saw that this was not the proper time to speak, for she had often pondered on the power of "a right word at the right time. Another day of gloomy idleness for Stephen: but Grace did not despair. He remained behind to lock up the room, and, in company with Prince, walked home again with the young teacher. "Stephen, are you afraid of John Dunstan?" asked Grace.

"Afraid! not I," answered Stephen; "I'm afraid of nobody." "Then what made you throw your books away to-day, after coming to a resolution to study?" "I was in a passion, miss," answered the boy.

"Yes," said Grace, "and you were afraid of being laughed at; was it not so?"
Stephen did not answer.

"Now, Stephen Wright, I am your friend; I'm determined to do you good to day. You meant to begin a new course; I saw it, Stephen; and you let that wicked boy drive away all your good resolutions. If you really want to do better, you must get above being laughed at. Begin to-morrow; never mind what the boys say, do; your duty; I'll elp you."

"Well, Miss Grace, I know I'm a mean coward, but I'll try to take your advice."

Next morning Stephen took his books again, and, notwithstanding the winks and jeers of his schoolmates, he controlled himself sufficiently to master two lessons.

PHYSICAL TRAINING FOR GIRLS.

THIS is the most momentous health proplem with which we have to deal, to secure the proper physical advantages of civilization for American women. Without this there can be no lasting progress. The Sandwich Island proverb says:

"If strong be the frame of the mother, Her sons shall make laws for the people."

But, in this country, it is scarcely an exaggeration to say that every man grows to maturity, surrounded by a circle of invalid from him, and she was sure that Stephen female relatives, and the latter finds himself would come and ask for employment at last. the husband of an invalid wife and the parent "Are you fond of fishing, Stephen?" asked of invalid daughters, and that he comes at Grace, giving her first tap on the shell of his last to regard invalidism, as Michelet coolly declares, the normal condition of the sex-He started, and turned, surprised, to look at her; for, in former days, he was never spoken to by teachers but in tones of reproof, or else not noticed at all. Seeing that she ing throng of school girls in summer, hurryreally wore a kind expression, the shell ing through every street, with fresh young faces, and vestures of lilies, duly curled, and "Yes, I like it when the fish bites; but straw-hatted and booted, and turned off as patterns of perfection by proud mammas—is it not sad to me to think that all this young and turned his head away. Among the myriad triumphs of "Well, then, jest down under the big tree; advancing civilization, there seems but one formidable danger, and that is here. It cannot be doubted, however, that the peril will pass by, with advancing knowledge. In proportion to our national recklessness of danger, is the promptness with which remedial measures are adopted, when at last they become indispensable. In the meantime, we must look for proofs of the physical resources of women in foreign and even in savage lands. When an American mother tells me with pride, as occasionally happens, that her you love that old dog by the door; and I daughter can walk two miles and back withdon't believe that you'll treat any one badly out great fatigue, the very boast seems a tragedy; but when one reads that Oberea, Stephen turned away to hide his face, Queen of the Sandwich Islands, lifted Cap-Grace could scarcely tell why; but she tain Wallis over a marsh as easily as if he tried to eat the nice light biscuit. crack nuts between her fingers and drive "Is that your dog?" inquired Grace, as nails into the wall with her thumb: whether the old dog rubbing his head against the boy, who patted the dog kindly in return.

Messas. Farrel, Herring at Co., 629 Chestnut Street.

Gentlemen: We have recovered the Herring's Patent Champion Safe, of your make, which we bought from you nearly five years ago, from the ruins of our building, No. 716 Chestnut street; which was entirely building, No. 716 Chestnut street; which was entirely beitroyed by fire on the morning of the 17th inst.

So rapid was the progress of the flames, before we could reach the store, the whole interior was one mass of fire. The Safe being in the back part of the store, of fire. The Safe being in the back part of the store, and surrounded by the most combustible materials, was exposed to great heat. It fell with the walls of that exposed to great heat.
