The testimony of nearly every man with whom he conversed was substantially as follows: "We used to kill and steal and do just what we liked, until our Agha received the gospel, five or six years ago. Since that time he opposes our doing anything bad. He all the time tells us that we must not steal, must try to live in peace with others, and do to others what we wish them to do to us. We have not left off all our iniquity, but there is nothing like what there used to be among us."

A great missionary festival was held near Arnheim Guelderland, in Holland, Aug. 6th, on the estate of a noble lady, offered for the purpose. It was under the direction of the Moravians. thousand persons were present. Brief reports of what the eleven societies in the Netherlands had done for the heathen, were made. Then the whole congregation united in praise, and the trumpets of the Moravian Brethren made their beautiful and solemn music resound over the hills. It is not possible to describe the effect produced by this music or by the mingled voice of these thousands uniting in hymns written for this special occasion. After a pause, in which bread and coffee were distributed, the public divided into four auditories around four rustic pulpits that had been erected at some distance from one another. In each of these a succession of preachers, who had been invited by the leading committee, addressed the people in speeches which were attended to with unmitigated interest. Battles in Northwestern Georgia.—The battles of Sept. 19th, 20th, and 21st were fought by the rebels to save the Gulf States from invasion and immediate conquest by Rosecrans, with the ultimate objects of recapturing Chattanooga and driving our army from East Tennessee. From various accounts we gather the following report of the battles:

At about a quarter to eleven on Saturday morning, without skirmishing, the enomy having massed at least two-thirds of their available force upon their right, precisely as they did at Chaplin Hills and Stone river, pounceg down upon the veterans under General Thomas upon the left, and, so sudden and fierce was the attack, that the whole column invol untarily fell back. In the charge we lost nearly eight hundred prisoners and several pieces of artillery. At this juncture the engagement became general along the whole line. Necessarily, a portion of the troops which had assaulted Thomas so vigorously were transferred to their respective divisions, a disposition which Thomas took advantage of as he quickly threw his whole corps upon the foe, took several hundred prisoners, and recaptured five out of the six guns just lost. From this time until dark, it was give and take, neither side gaining a decided advantage. The condition of the country prevented the free use of artillery, and, for several hours, but few cannons were fired. On the 19th, the battle terminating about dark, it was found that our loss was slight, considering that much close fighting had taken place. During Saturday night our army threw up rifle pits near West Chickamauga river, besides clearing the road, in case it should be deemed advisable to fall back upon Rossville or even Chattanooga between Lookout and Mission Ridge.

THE SECOND DAY'S FIGHT.

is thus described by the Washington Star: The first gun was fired at 9 o'clock, A. M., but no considerable firing took place till 10 o'clock. Previous to this, General Rosecrans rode along the whole length of our lines. Soon after the battle commenced General Thomas, who held the left, began to call for reinforcements. At about noon word came that he had been forced to retire. The second line of reinforcements were then sent to him, General as a reserve in the centre, was sent to his assistance.
Wood, of Crittenden's Corps, and Van Cleve, who held the front centre, was also ordered to the left, where the fury of the cannonading showed that the rebel force was massed. Their places were filled by. Davis and Sheridan of McCook's Corps. But hardly had these divisions taken their places in the lipe when the rebel fire, which had slackened, burst out in immense volleys upon the centre. This lasted about twenty minutes, and then Van Cleve, on Thomas' right, was seen to give way, but in tolerable order; soon after which the lines of Sheridan and Davis broke in disorder, borne down by the enemy's columns, said to have consisted of Polk's corps. These two were the only divisions thrown into much disorder. Those of Negley and Van Cleve were thrown into confusion, but soon rallied, and held their places, the first on the left, and the second on the right of Thomas' corps. Davis and Sheridan late in the day succeeded in rallying about 8,000 of their forces, and joined General Thomas, who, finding himself cut off from the right, brought his divisions into position for independent fighting, his line assuming the form of a horse-shoe along the crest of a wooded ridge. He was soon joined by General Granger, from Rossville, with a division of McCook's and Stedman's division, and with these forces firmly maintained the fight until after dark. Our forces were as immoveable as the rocks they stood on. The enemy repeatedly hurled against them the dense columns which had routed Davis and Sheridan in the morning, but every onset was repulsed with dreadful slaughter. Falling first on one and then on another point of our lines, the rebels for hours vainly sought to break them. General Thomas seemed to have filled every soldier with his own unconquerable firmness, and General Granger, his hat torn by bullets, rode like a lion wherever the combat was the hottest. Every division commander bore himself gloriously, designed to co-operate. and among them, Generals Turchin, Hazen, and Pur-

Gen. Rosecrans' order for his entire command to concentrate theory of the Mohammedans is, that their own was accomplished before midnight of that day, and it system is soon to fall and be superseded by Christianity; but that, ultimately, Mohammedanism will revive and triumph. This belief may do much to prepare the way for the early prevalence of the gospel among them."

Rebel Dispatches.—The Richmond Dispatch, of the 23d instant contains the following:

"CHICKAMAUGA, Ga., Sept. 20.—After two days" hard fighting we have driven the enemy, after a desperate resistance, from several positions, but he still confronts us. The losses are heavy on both sides, especially so among our officers. We have taken twenty pieces of artillery and 2,500 prisoners.

—BRAGG: "To Adjutant General Cooper."

Rosecrans has been heavily reinforced by troops from Grant's army.

The Richmond Whig of the 23d, reports three "On the one hand, they appear indifferent and unimpressible under the presentation of religious truth. On the other, they profess to be very anxious to have the gospel preached to them."

Mr. B. estimates the number of these Koords within the bounds of that station as from 100,000 to 300,000 souls.

over 50 pieces of artillery. A Herald correspondent confirms this loss in material, but says the rebel loss n killed and wounded exceeds our own. Their killed he computes to be double ours.

Further Despatches.—Strength of the Enemy.-A Nashville telegram, Sept. 23d, reports that there was no fighting on Wednesday. Our forces still hold the position of yesterday, which is an evidence of strength, as every hour increases the chances for reinforcements from Burnside to arrive, and enables our forces to more thoroughly entrench themselves. The strength of the enemy's forces is not far from one hundred thousand men, nearly twice the number of our own, Generals Joe Johnston and Bragg were in command, with Polk on the right and A. P. Hill on the left. All the available men from the different armies of the Confederacy assisted in this contest, Longstreet's corps, under Generals Jackson and Ely, arriving after the commencement of the to Bragg.

The result of the fighting so far is that the rebels have taken 2,000 prisoners and 20 guns, while we have captured 1,300 prisoners and 10 guns. The unofficial estimate of the rebel forces at 140,000 is regarded in Government circles as greatly exaggerated. If, however, as is thought not unlikely, they were 100,000 they largely outnumbered Rosecrans' troops actually engaged. They say that the victory would have been overwhelming had Gen. Burnside been more swift to reinforce the Army of the Cumberland.

The N. Y. Evening Post complains of Burnside's tardiness to reinforce Rosecrans, according to government orders, and says the result of the battles would have been widely different had he done so, Louisville dispatches, however, say that the battle had long concluded before Burnside knew of it.

Army of the Cumberland.—The advance of Gen. Rosecrans on Cattanooga, and that of Gen. Burnside on Knoxville were great military achievements. The correspondent of a New York paper thus speaks of the former:

We take up Rollin and are struck with wonder at Hannibal's feat of crossing the Alps; but no cotomporaneous historian will be able to find the language to impress upon the mind of the public the difficul-ties and dangers encountered in making such a campaign as Rosecrans has just finished. He has crossed no Alps; but in twenty-three days he has crossed three ranges of mountains fifteen hundred and twenty-four hundred feet high, a river a quarter of a mile wide, carrying with him forty-five days rations, and simply by strategy—pure, unalloyed strategic movements—with the loss of six men, four by accident, has driven a powerful enemy from a a great stronghold in rapid retreat. The campaign s truly a wonderful one, and more wonderful still as having been carried out at the distance of three hundred miles from his actual and reliable base of

Army of the Potomac.—Gen. Buford, with a por f his division, drove the rebel pickets, Sept. 22d, through Madison Court House. Three miles beyond he encountered a strong force of the enemy's cavalry. After a spirited fight he forced them to retreat, and drove them across the Rapidan at the point where the Gordonsville pike intercepts the river. The action reflects the highest credit on all our troops entwenty wounded. We took forty-five prisoners.

Louisiana and Texas.—Gen. Herron has cleared he country between the Red river and Port Hudson from guerilla parties who have been firing upon transports, and driven Gen. Green west of the Atchafalaya river, with considerable loss. Among the prisoners captured was the agent of the rebel government, and among them, Generals Turchin, Hazen, and Parker, especially distinguished themselves. General Turchin charged through the rebel line with the bayonet, and being surrounded, forced his way back again. General Parker, also, had two horses shot under him on Saturday. Forming his men in one line, he made them lie down until the enemy was close upon them, when suddenly they arose and delivered their fire with such effect that the assaulting column fell back in confusion, leaving the ground covered with killed. Foreign.—By the America, we have news up to the 16th of September. One of the steam rams was about to make a "trial trip," to—to endeavor to run out to sea. A portion of the crew of the Florida has come over from Brest to Liverpool, doubtless to man the pirate and bring her to our ports. The Times reiterates its opinion that the government should detain the rams until cleared of suspicion.

Quite a fleet of Russian war vessels are in the port of New York. None are more welcome. The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad is not in the hands of the military, and doubt is thrown upon the story of the movements of the Army of the Potomac, as above stated.

Foreign.

By the China, from Liverpool, Sept. 12, we have the important information that Earl Russell had given a written assurance to Minister Adams that the steam rams in the Mersey should not be allowed to depart. The public journals confirm this statement. The Shipping Gazette says they can only be detained by a stretch of authority.

France.—Application was made to the Marseilles Tribunal of Commerce, by the owners of a part of the cargo on the ship W. B. Nash, for authority to seize the pirate Florida, which is lying at Brest, until their claim for a hundred thousand francs was settled. The authority was granted. Slidell had gone to Brest to arrange the affair. The Tribunal of Commerce of Bordeaux has tried an insurance case which involves the question whether the Alabama was a pirate or a privateer. The decision was that the Alabama had not exceeded her belligerent rights, nor incurred the reproach of a piracy.

It is postively asserted that the Archduke of Maximilian has accepted the Mexican crown.
