PHILADELPHIA, THURSDAY, JUNE 16, 1864.

Correspondence.

LETTER FROM CHINA.

MENCIUS' DOCTRINE OF HUMAN NATURE. 11.

But the question arises, "Is the view of Human Nature propounded by Mencius correct?" As far as yet appears, the translator sees not how the question can be answered otherwise than in the affirmative. Man was formed for virtue. Bo it that his conduct is very far from being conformed to virtue, that simply fastens on him the shame and guilt. Man, heathen man, a Gentile without the law is still not without the law unto himself. The proper use of Mencius' principles is to reprove the Chinese, and ourselves as well, of the thousand acts of sin of which they and we are guilty, that come within their sweep and their condemnation.

From the ideal to the actual of man, there is a vast descent. Between what he ought to be and what he is, the contrast is melancholy. "Benevolence," said our philosopher, " is the characteristic of man." It is the "wide house in which the world should dwell." while " propriety" is "the correct position in which the world should ever be found," and "righteousness" is "the great path which men should ever be pursuing." In opposition to this, however, hatred. sacrifice the noble part of themselves follow that part which is little and not power of evil example.

mind," Mencius most pertinaciously ad- power to do it. heres. He will not allow that original badness can be predicated of human Being situated, however, in the borders human nature produced in him no deep activity of the vegetative life day and error. He never betrays any consciousings proper to humanity?" rather than erroneous. According to Mencius, the sages were neither were their minds.

fectly exhibiting the human relations," might be to every earnest individual, were perfect.

Here we feel that the doctrine of Mencius wants an element which Revelation supplies. He knows nothing of the fact that "by one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin, and so death passed upon all men, because all sinned." We have our ideal as well as go back to Adam, as he was made by God in His own image, after His likeness. In him the model is soon shattered, and we do not discover it again, till God's own Son appeared in the world, made in the likeness of sinful flesh, yet without sin.

When Mencius points to Yaou, Shun and Confucius, and says they were perfect and all men may become perfect, we cannot accept his statement. Understanding that he is speaking of them only in the sphere of human relations. we must yet believe that in many things they come short. One of the three, the greatest of them in Mencius' estimation, Confucius, again and again confesses so of himself. He says he was seventy years old before he could follow what his heart desired, without transgressing what was right. The improprieties and unrighteousness are image of sagely perfection is broken constant phenomena of human life. by what is implied in this admission Mencius is ready enough to admit the and confession. It proves it to be but fact that men in general do evil and a brilliant and unsubstantial phantom violate the law of their nature. They of our philosopher's own imagining When he insists again, that every indifor the gratification of the ignoble; they vidual may become what he fancies the sages were, i. e., perfect, living in love, that part which is great. He can say walking in righteousness, orservant of pronothing further in explanation of the priety, approving wnatever is good and fact, except that he points out the effect disapproving whatever is evil; he is push of injurious circumstances, and the ing his doctrine beyond its proper limit. It supplies a law of conduct, but law To the principle implied in the sen- only gives the knowledge of what we tence "Losing the proper nature of one's are required to do; it does not give the

Mencius is not to be blamed for his ignorance of what is to us the Doctrine nature from any amount of actual of the Fali. He had no means of bewickedness. "The trees," said he, "of coming acquainted with it. We have the New Mountain, were once beautiful. to regret, however, that his study of of a large state, they were hewn down | feelings on account of men's proneness with axes and bills; and could they to go astray. He is greatly lacking in retain their beauty? Still, through the humility and in sympathy with human night, and the nourishing influence of ness of his own weakness. Confucius the rain and dew, they were not without acknowledged that he came short of buds and sprouts springing forth: but what he knew he ought to have been. then came the cattle and goats and We do not meet with this in Mencius. browsed upon them. To these things His merit is that of the speculative is owing the bare and stripped appear- thinker. His glance is searching, and ance of the mountain, which, when his penetration deep; but there is wantpeople see, they think it was never ing that moral sensibility which would finely wooded. But is this the proper draw him to us in our best moments, as nature of the mountain? And so also a man of like passions with us. The of what properly belongs to man; shall absence of humility is naturally accomit be said that the mind of any man was panied with a lack of sympathy. There without benevolence and righteousness? is a hardness about his teachings. He The way in which a man loses his proper is the professor in the class room, amid goodness of mind is like the way in a throng of pupils who are admiring his which the trees are denuded by axes science and his dexterity. He forgets, and bills. Hewn down day after day, in the triumph of his skill, the suffering can the mind retain its beauty? The of the patient. The transgressors of nature becomes not much different from | their nature are to Mencius the "tyrants that of the irrational animals, which, of themselves" or the "self-abandoned." when people see, they think it never The utmost stretch of his commiserahad those powers which I assert. But tion is a contemptuous "Alas for them !" does this condition represent the feel. The radical defect of the orthodox | blessings? Or do they think it so poor workman, enabling him to form perfect to our fellow men are to be performed Judge who last year perverted justice circles and squares, that the sages, " per- as to God, he could not have thought so by thrusting back a young Hindu conhighly as he did of man's powers; a suspicion might have grown up that enabling him to perfect himself as they there is a shadow on the light he has in himself.

This, absence of the recognition of man's highest obligations from Mencius' ideal of our nature, is itself a striking illustration of man's estrangement from God. His teaching has prepared the way for the grosser conceptions of the modern literati, who would he; but for the living reality we must often seem to deny the Divine Personality altogether, and substitute for both God and Heaven a mere principle of order or fitness of things. It has done more : it has left the people in the mass to become an easy prey to the idolatrous fooleries of Buddhism. Yea, the unreligiousness of the teachers has helped to deprave still more the religion of the nation, such as it is, and make its services a miserable pageant of irrev. erant forms.

It is time to have done with the subject. It may be thought by some that more than justice has been done to Mencius in the first part of this discussion, and less than justice at the last but the translator hopes that it is not so. A very important use is to be made both of what he succeeds in, and where he fails, in his discoursing on human nature. His principles may be, and it is conceived ought to be, turned against himself. They should be pressed to produce the conviction of sin. There is enough in them, if the conscience be but quickened by the Spirit of God, to make the haughtiest scholar cry out, "O. wretched man that I am ! who shall deliver me from this body of death ?" Then may it be said to him with effect, "Behold the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world !" Then may Christ as a new and true exemplar of all that man should be, be displayed "altogether lovely" to the trembling mind. ultimate supremacy of God's truth.

One thing should be plain. In Mencius' lessons on human duty, there is no hope for his countrymen. If they serve as a schoolmaster to bring them to Christ, they will have done their part; but it is from Christ alone that the help of the Chinese can come.

LETTER FROM INDIA.

My DEAR BROTHER MEARS :--- Your valuable paper comes to us with great regularity, always welcome as a representative of dear old Philadelphia, and bringing us tidings from many dear friends still "linked in pleasant memories."

But what a grand improvement you have made with the new year-enlisting the choice energies of more heads and earts, and sending us a double portion vert into the power of his heathen friends; taking occasion, at the trial, to abuse missionaries in general, and the venerable Dr. Duff in particular. He has just visited Bombay en route to England; and in a foolish self-laudatory speech he gave occasion for the press of India to visit him with a fresh infliction, all the more severe for being so foolishly provoked, and so unquestionably merited. The Madras News says :

"It is a melancholy thing to see a man, who has done hard and honorable service, digging the grave of his own reputation, and proving out of his own ips that whatever may be bis industry and integrity, whatever may be his position which requires common sense." utterances from all parts of India; and we trust it gives promise of more righteous decisions hereafter in our higher

HINDU REFORM.

The reform party at Calcutta, connected with a society known as the Brahmo Somaj, have recently sent their Secretary Baboo Keshub. Chunder Sen, as their representative to visit the educated young Hindus of Bombay. The Baboo has just given a lecture to a large audience in the Town Hall, and both English and vernacular reports of it go to show that genuine elements of reform are vigorously at work in the native mind. The Baboo appears as no advocate of Christianity, but certainly the principles he maintains are always found in close connection with the Gospel. He advocates female education, and the re-marriage of Hindu widows, condemns child-marriages, and discards all idolatry and the whole system of Hindu caste. He is said to exhibit much ability and some eloquence, and thoroughly to have aroused the young men of Bombay. We rejoice in all such agitation, and have absolute confidence in the divinity and courts.

DEATH OF LITTLE PRAMA. The Sabbath schools who feel a kind interest in these dear children will share in our sorrow at the death of one of them---the first taken from our "little flock." She was a dear little girl, the child of our native Helper, and he some eighty miles away, preaching and distributing tracts and portions of Scripture in the villages when she died. It will be a heavy blow to him, poor man; and indeed makes all our hearts very sad. We know not how to spare any one from our little band of believers and their baptized children. Her poor mother is full of grief; but her Christian submission, hope and trust in God shine out sweetly amidst her sorrow; giving streets of Saijapoor, near Patna, because the Roman Empire. So numerous were he had not saluted that Officer. The Wah Googroo, i. e. Govind Singh, he said, prompted him, probably in a dream, to take vengeance on any European on persecuted, refusing to worship the the first opportunity that offered. The victim was the unoffending Missionary, a man whose name has been associated for so many years with the Lodiana and fortitude under suffering gave evi-Mission, and whose loss will be no less dence of a high order of piety. folt by that body than by his family and friends. The reverend gentleman died at a quarter to six on the morning of the 25th, having remained insensible from the time he was struck. The blows were not given during the excitement of religious controversy (the deceased had never even spoken to the murderer), but in the cold-blooded spirit of revenge; the Missionary died, ability and learning, he is unfit for any not a martyr to the faith which he lives to the cause. taught, but a victim to the sullen rage This is a mere echo of the severer of an Akalee fanatic. There was but one general feeling in Anundpoor, and it was a desire to cut in pieces Bhag Singh. He richly deserved to have been hanged on the spot without a trial, and though the Government would probably not have approved of such a summary proceeding, yet public opinion would not have been against it. In a case like this, the punishment should be sharp and severe.

MISSIONARY ENTERPRISE )IN THE EARLY OHUROH.

ANOTHER SCRAP FROM ANCIENT HISTORY.

Much of the history of the Church in the first four or five centuries is taken up with accounts of the persecutions carried on by the Roman power-much space is also occupied with accounts of Theological discussions of faithful bishops and presbyters upon the various heresies that arose-and the machinations of the leading heretics to obtain power and influence in the Church. It is refreshing to find in the midst of such a record, that the Church was possessed of some true missionary zeal and enterprise.

In the fourth century, a philosopher from Tyre, from the love of travel and research, explored the interior of what was called India: supposed to be the Abyssinia of the present day. He took in his company two pious boys, relatives, who were well educated. The whole party was murdered except the boys, who were retained by the royal family, (in whose eyes they found favor) for the purpose, among other things, of educating the young prince. They soon rose to positions of importance and like of heretic against me and my influence Daniel of old, one of them was appointed prime minister. His name was Frumentius. With the assistance of some Roman merchants who traded there, he discovered a few scattered Christians, collected them together and built a church for them. By the united efforts of this little band of believers the native heathen were brought in, converted and instructed. After a time the new evidence of the blessed change brothers were reluctantly allowed to visit their native home, Framentius immediately reported to Athanasius, the Bishop of Alexandria, requesting assistance to evangelize the country. Athanasius, after careful consideration, ordained him "Bishop of the Indians" giving way of the embaokment. 1st. The drain pipes were carried when he returned and zealously carried through the puddle wall, without any on his missonary work. A copious out- flanges or collars to prevent the water pouring of the Spirit of God soon blessed following along the pipe, as it was cerhis labors, many churches were built and tain to do, for it is impossible to make a large numbers converted. The genuine- and cast-iron pipe, as any one who has ness of the work appears from the fact tried it, well knows. that the Emperor Constantius found it impossible afterward to introduce his favorite Arian heresy into the Indian Church, although be ordered Frumen- bankment, bentand perhaps broke every tius deposed and an Arian bishop appointed. Obristianity was spread in Iberia, bordering on the Black Sea, by a pious woman who had been taken captive by the Iberians. It is said that both the end of the pipe, outside the embankking and queen of the country were converted under her teaching.

grievances), how he had been one day were carried to that region by means of struck with a whip by an Officer in the the trade and commerce carried on with the converts in Persia in this century that thousands of them were severely Sun. The Magi and Jews assisted in persecuting them, but their sincerity

> Let us, Christians of the highly fa. vored nineteenth century, never forget that men lived 1500 years ago, whose sacrifices to spread the Gospel among the heathens amounted to more than an annual donation to a missionary board. They gave their time, their energy, their comforts, yea their very G. W. M.

UNION OF PRESYTEBRIANS AT THE SOUTH.

The Pittsburg Banner gives the following from a late number of the Southern Presbyterian:

The Presbytery of East Alabama expresses its approval of a proposed union between the Southern Presbyterian Church (O.S.) and the United Synod; (or New School.)

On the other hand the South Carolina Presbytery vehemently protests against the proposed union. They affirm that "The glorious vindication of the doctrines of grace made by our Church in 1837 was a separation from undoubted heretics. The parties now proposed to be introduced into union with us continued in fellowship with those heretics until driven out by their legislation against the political institutions of our country. This Presbytery cannot un-derstand how it is possible for the United Synod to have held at one and the same time to the theology of BARNES, BEMAN, and BEECHER, and to the theology of our Old School Standards." They insist upon a "formal and distinct repudiation by them of every one of the New School errors," before the union be consummated.

GARIBALDI ON THE PAPACY.-Amonget the incessant deputations which Garibaldi was good natured enough to receive during his stay in London, was one from the "Evangelical Continental Society," to an address from whom he is reported to have replied: "You are the true friends of progress, and I am glad to see you. In Italy the moral influence of the Papacy is extinct, and if the French were withdrawn from Rome the Papacy would cease to exist in Italy. I do not say that I am Protestant, for if I did the priests would raise the cry would be gone. We are sons of the same God.

[PREPARED FOR OUR COLUMNS] THE CATASTROPHE AT SHEFFIELD, ENGLAND.

WHY THE BRADFIELD RESERVOIR SHOULD HAVE GIVEN WAY.

Up to this point the translator fails needs a knowledge of duty to insure its portation? to perceive anything in Mencius' views | performance,--is in him exceedingly of human nature that is contrary to the apparent. Confucius and Mencius, and teachings of our Christian Scriptures others, most strangely never thought and that may not be employed with to have called this principle in question. advantage by the missionary in his | It is always as in the formulary of Tszepreaching to the Chinese. It is far sze, a very eminent Chinese worthy : from covering what we know to be the "Given the sincerity, and there shall whole duty of man, yet it is defective be the intelligence; given the intelligence, and there shall be the sincerity." We have said that Mencius' doctrine actually perfect, and perfection is pos- of human nature was defective, inassible to all men. The actual realization | much as his ideal does not cover the of his views he found in the sages, and whole field of duty. He says very he contended it was within the reach of little of what we owe to God. There is every individual. "All things which no glow of natural piety in his pages. are the same in kind," he says, "are Never once when he is treating of the like one another; why should we doubt | nature of man does he make mention of in regard to man as if he were a solitary any exercise of the mind as due directly exception to this? The sage and we to God. The services of religion come, are the same in kind." The feet, the in China, under the principle of promouths, the eyes of the sage were not | priety, and are a cold formalism; but different from those of other men, even other things come with Mencius before them. We are told : " The rich-Among the sages, however, Mencius est fruit of love is this-the serving made a distinction. Yaou and Shun of one's parents; the richest fruit of exceeded all the rest, unless it might be righteousness is this-the obeying one's Confucius. Those three never came elder brothers; the richest fruit of wisdom short of and never went beyond the is this-the knowing those two things law of their nature. The ideal and the and not departing from them ; the richest actual were in them always one and the fruit of propriety is this-the ordering same. The others had only attained to and adorning those two things." How perfection by vigorous effort and cul- different all this, from the reiterated deture. "Yaou and Shun were what they claration of the Scriptures that "the were by nature; Tang and Woo were fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisso by returning to natural virtue." dom !" The first and great command-The actual result was, however, the ment, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God same, and therefore he could hold them with all thy heart and soul and mind and up as models to his countrymen of the strength," was never thought of, much style of man that they all ought to be less delivered by any Chinese philosoand might be. What the compass and pher or sage. Had Mencius apprethe square were in the bands of the hended this, and seen how all our duties of your richer fare. We feel like sending you a new vote of thanks. May the American Presbyterian live a thousand years. Surely it should henceforth become the favorite and special organ of "our church."

MISSION CHURCHES IN HEATHEN LANDS.

And so our good friends of the N.Y. Evangelist consent to limit our Presbyterian polity to Christendom. Are we to understand they like it so well they wish to keep it all to themselves; not allowing us in heathendom to share its moral school of China,-that there only a commodity as not to be worth trans-

> Doubtless this subject is to elicit more thought, if not discussion, among our intelligent patrons; and though I had in mind only the briefest allusion to it, let me suggest, in addition, two or three thoughts.

1. We must teach some church order and polity to our Mission Churches. If our churches are not Presbyterian they will be something else.

2. If there is nothing in our Presbyterian principles worth propagating, why not call them a failure; abandon them wherever they exist and adopt better?

3. The idea that Presbyterianism is not adapted to our Mission Churches is a fallacy. Its good order, safety-valves and conservative power are all more needed here than there.

OUR VICEROY.

You learned who was to be our Governor-General before we did. Sir John Lawrence's appointment is most welcome to all Europeans in India, except a very few of a peculiar class, who regret that he is not "a Lord," not one of "our nobility." His long Indian experience, business habits, sterling qualities and Christian character give promise of an administration highly efficient to India. But he will exhibit special moral courage if he varies at all from the course of his predecessors, on religious questions. O that our statesmon would act on the belief that "India has been given to England for the good of her people and the glory of God."

SIR MORDAUNT WELLS.

God's grace effects in these Hindu hearts. We hope dear friends will often pray for these native converts who have believed through our word. In the service of the Gospel, yours sincerely. R. G. WILDER. KOLAPOOE, April 9th, 1864.

P. S. It is with feelings of sorrow l know not how to describe that I open my letter to tell you of the murder of our beloved brother Janver. How strange a providence that one whose whole life and bearing was so full of meekness, and the sweet graces of the gospel should become a victim of such cruel revenge! I send you brief details in the enclosed extract from the " Times of India ;" all we yet know of the sad event. My heart grieves with no common grief. My acquaintance with this dear brother originated in America, in your precious noon-day prayer meeting ; and since returning to this land, though separated by almost the whole length of India, his occasional letters have breathed a living interest in our common work, with a spirit of sympathy and Christian affection which- bound my heart to him still more closely. Alas that he has thus fallen ! But in God's economy his death shall not be in vain. Dying we live-victory is ever by the Cross. MURDER OF A MISSIONARY IN THE PUNJAB.

Lahore, 28th March, 1864.-We pub lish with deep sorrow the sad details of the murder of the Rev. Levi Janvier, at Anundpoor, in the Hosyarpoor district. The Holee festival commenced on the 21st and ended on the 26th instant at Anundpoor. This place was visited on the occasion of the above festival by the Rev. Mr. Janvier, with his wife and child. The unfortunate Missionary was passing from one tent of his to the other about S or 9 P. M, of the 24th, when two blows were dealt him on the side of the head by an Akalee Seikh named Bhag Singh, who instantly made off, but was apprehended a short distance away by some of the converts. When caught the Nihung said he had done the deed to avenge himself for certain supposed insults he had received from the English. He related how he had been dismissed from Government employ on one occasion, and on parting had received 30 stripes; how on a second he had not been paid what was due to him for his Christian churches were also built in Arabia, and a bishop appointed, through damping material from a railroad car, the influence of ambassadors sent thither in tips of about two feet deep,-these by the Emperor Constanting.

The Gospel must have been carried to Great Britain at an earlier period; as we learn that an ecclesiastical council was called by the Emperor Constantius to consider the Arian heresy. Orders were given by the Emperor to supply the expenses of the bishops attending, from various countries, out of the public treasury. The bishops from Britain thought it unbecoming their position to receive secular maintenance, and proudly bore their own expenses. Only three of their number were too poor to refuse the bounty of the Emperor. The accurate preservation of the circumstance in history, indicates a Christian Church in Britain at the time, of large dimensions and considerable wealth.

During this fourth century Christian- employed on the British railroads. ity spread itself beyond the Roman Em- These travel yearly about 120,000,000 pire. Heathens living on the Rhine and miles. Each engine will run about in the remotest parts of France had be-come Christians. The Goths, in the and renewals; which may be considercome Christians. The Goths, in the country of the Danube had carried away annual waste of locomotives, may be set captives from the Christian countries down at 400, of which 50 are destroyed they invaded, among whom were pions by casualties, and 350 worn out by acbishops, who remained among them as tual service. The average consumption services; and on a third (and this seems missionaries. Christians in Armenia and or fuel is about 502 lbs of coal per mile You will remember this Calentia to have been the clowning point of his Persia began to be numerous. They annum.

The fatal results and immense dam. age done by the breaking of the reservoir is fresh before the mind of the public; and a few suggestions gleaned from the evidence before the Coroner's Jury, may satisfy the practical engineer that there were abundant reasons for the perfect joining between clay puddle

2. The drain pipes were laid on a bed of puddle, the entire distance through the embankment-500 feet. The irregular pressure and settlement of the emone off.

- 3. The drain was composed of but two 18 inch pipes, not of sufficient area to vent the water coming into the reservoir.

4. The stops were placed at the lower ment, with a pressure of over 10,000 pounds continually, tending to drive the pipe apart. 5. The embankment was formed by forming as loose and open a bank as possible, one totally unfit for a resorvoir. 6. The reservoir was filled suddenly, without any testing of the embankment by cautions filling, which should have occupied weeks of time, careful working and frequent inspection, by a competent engineer.

Had these blunders been the work of an American engineer, what serious and wholesome counsel our cousins over the water would have administered to us for recklessness. The above suggestions however may be of some use to young and inexperienced engineers in this country; but the very superior talent, profound learning and great experience of the world renowned engineers of Great Britain, are no doubt beyond such homely suggestions.

LOCOMOTIVE POWER.

There are about 6500 locomotives, ed the useful life of a locomotive. The of fuel is about 361 the of coal per mile