A Message from God.

A New Year's Discourse preached at the First Presbyterian Church, Washington Square, Jan. 6, 1857, by Rev. Albert Barnes.

Flionographically reported for The American Presbyterian by M. L. Simons.

'I have a message from God unto thee."-Judges, iii. 20. It is not necessary to my purpose to explain the circumstances under which these words were used: nor is it necessary at all for my purpose to vindicate the conduct of the man who used them, or to inquire

A message from God may be brought to man in such a way as to make him turn pale and tremble. And it may be hardly conceived possible that a message should come to us directly from God-where we are assured it came from Him-without making us turn pale and tremble, when we consider the source of the message and when we ponder in regard to its meaning. We may imagine what would be the emotions of those in ancient times, to whom God sent His messages, to whom he had directly communicated His will, and to whom He communicated His will by angels sent forth for that purpose, as in the case of Abraham, of Jacob, and of Samuel, and of Noah, Isaiah and Daniel, and Elizabeth, the mother of John the Baptist, and Mary the mother of our Lord.

It is not necessary further, in order that the message should come, that it should be conveyed by the instrument lity of an angel, or by the voice of God directly speaking to us. Whatever there is in the Bible that is appropriate to our circumstances, to our time of life, or to our character, may be regarded as a message from God to us. For the Bible is given for the human family, to be adapted to all the circumstances and conditions of human life; and whatever there is in the providence of God that affixes to us any manifest lesson as springing from that dispensation of His providence, may be regarded as a message from God to us,

With this understanding with regard to what constitutes a message from God, it is no presumption for me to come before you on the first Sabbath of the new year, and say, I have a message from God

There are several points to which I wish to call your attention, in regard to that message, which seem to be appropriate to the occasion.

1. The first thing God commands each one of you to remember is, you are mortal! You remember the example of the prince who directed the servant who each morning should call him, to say, "Sire, remember thou art mortal?" The great truth which he desired not to forget was, that he should die. So, it is not improper to say to each one of you here present, that God commands you to bear in remembrance that you are mortal-that you are to dieand after taking such views of lite as shall be consistent with that thought, to form such plans of life as may be proper to form in view of that fact and

Now, that God directly issues this commandment, and that He desires it shall be kept directly before your mind, is apparent from the Scriptures, and from the evidence occurring under His providence.

1. From the Scriptures. There is no one subject, I may venture to say, to which there is so frequent reference in various forms in the Bible, as the subject of Death-so much so as to make that book very repulsive to a large class of persons not desirous of contemplating the subject. Among other reasons, doubtless, for neglecting the bible, is this one: that it is a book so serious and solemn, with so much on dying, on the judgment, and on the future state.

Now the Bible seems to have been communicated to man with this idea in the mind of the Great Author, that there would be a proneness in the mind of man to forget it. So, in the Bible, it is presented in such varieties of form as to secure the attention of men to the fact that they are mortal, and are to The Great Author th acknowledges the fac that there would be such disposition on the part of man as to make this subject very distasteful; that there was no other subject from which man was more d sposed to turn away.

Naturally so, it is made more so by the nature of their pursuits, plans and hopes in this world. Death cannot be well made a subject of pleasant contemplation: the grave is a cold, dark, cheerless resting place. Then men are unwilling to contemplate the thought that they are to pass away from this world, and stand before God to give account for the deeds done in the body, with a view to the sentence that is to determine their everlasting condition in the future world. Hence it is, that in the Bible there are so frequent appeals on this subject, and so constant references in regard to the fact, Man is mortal.

2. the same fact is true in reference to the design of I rovidence to keep this before the minds of men. Call to remembrance, my friends, how often you have been appealed to on the subject by the example of friends and companions of other years. Bring before your minds, for asmoment, those who started with you on the journey of life, your schoolmates, your playmates, your college-mates, and remember how many of them have tallen on your right hand and on your left, leaving you to pursue your journey without them. Call to remembrance the evidence which are occurring at all times in the world, adapted and designed to keep this truth, "You are mortal!" before your minds. Recall the frequency with which you have passed a door veiled with crape. becall to your remembrance the number of windows that are bowed, and the indications of mourning in a congregation like this, and the funeral trains. I ask you, how far can you go in your walks within either the city or the country without coming on graves, tombs or monuments, in the place where the dead repose? You remember that Washington Square is an old burial-ground, and full of dead men's bones; and that whenever you pass over it, you are passing over the bones of the dead. Now, by these things, designed under the providence of God, He intends to keep this truth before our minds, We are

Then look over the evidences of the past. Take the past year, and see how God has endeavored to bring this truth before your minds. There can be very few here who have not been reminded, by death coming into their circle of friends or relatives, that with us the last year, and now they are gone; we shall see them no more in the land of life.

II. God commands you to keep His laws. That is the message I have to bring you to day, as the rule of lite and the guide of your conduct. It is not improper to bring that up at the beginning of the year, to remind you of its importance; because there are so many laws that guide and influence us in life, irreconcitable with the law of God-as the law of fashion, of honor, of trade-in reference to which we must make comparison between these laws and the spiritual law that is to guide our hearts. At the beginning of the year, it is not improper that I, as a messenger from God, should lay this command across your path to guide your feet. tempest around Mount Sinai, which was all on fire. the flesh and the devil.

And there were thunderings, and a voice, and a sound through the midst of the fire, accompanying the giving of the law.

Now, as a part of my services this morning, a part of the message I bring you from God, it is not improper I shou'd remind you in a few words what that law is, thus given to you. Our Episcopa! brethren, with great propriety, read these laws in every morning service, and they append, with great propriety, at the close of each one of them, "Lord. have mercy upon us, and incline our hearts to keep this law.

The law of God is addressed to you in these

Thou shalt have no other gods before me. Thou shalt not make unto thee any graven image, or any likeness of any thing that is in heaven above, or that is in the earth beneath, or that is in the water under the earth: thou shalt not bow down thyself to them, nor serve them: for I, the Lord thy God, am a jealous God, visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children unto the third and fourth generation of them that hate me; and showing mercy into thousands of them that love me, and keep my commandments.

Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain: for the Lord will not hold him guiltless that taketh his name in vain.

Remember the Sabbath day, that thou keep it holy. Six days shalt thou labor, and do all thy work: but the seventh day is the Sabbath of the Lord thy God: in it thou shalt not do any work; thou, nor thy son, nor thy daughter, thy manservant, nor thy maid-servant, nor thy cattle, nor the stranger that is within thy gates: for in six days the Lord made heaven and earth, the sea and all that in them is, and rested the seventh day; wherefore the Lord blessed the Sabbath day and hal Honor thy father and thy mother; that thy days may be long upon the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee.

Thou shalt not kill.

Thou shalt not commit adultery.

Thou shalt not steal. Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy ieighbor. Thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's house, thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's wife, nor his manservant, nor his maid-servant, nor hisox, nor his ass, nor any thing that is thy neighbor's.

Now, that is the law of God, the law of God unrepealed; the law of God binding on nations, on kings, rulers, and all princes and legislatures, and on all the people. It is the law of God binding on you-each one of you as an individual-to be observed in all filelity and honesty, through all the days of your life.

Perceive how pecific it is; it is not general. Thou! thou shalt have no other gods before me Thou shalt not make unto thee any graven image! Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God n vain! Thou remember the Sabbath day, to keep it holy. Six days shalt thou labor and do all thy work! Honor thy father and thy mother! Thou shalt not kill! Thou shalt not commit adultery! Thou shalt not steal! Thou shalt not bear false witness! Thru sha!t not covet any thing that is thy neighbor's!

This is the law of God as addressed to all men. This is the message which I bring before you this day-that this is the law of God, and that it, and each part of it, is binding upon each individual of the human family. III. In the third place, God commands you at the beginning of the new year, to repent of your sins. I need not say that this is God's commandment, that it is a commandment which he addresses to the children of men, to consider they are guilty of violating his laws, and on the presumption that all the children of men are guilty, in having, in one form or another, violated that law.

The message of John the Baptist, appearing at the beginning of our dispensation, was "Repent ye: for the kingdom of heaven is at hand." The message of our Saviour was, Repent! And that this He designed for all, even for those who think themselves not to have grave sins, is pointedly illustrated in the alas! is all gone; and perchance, while I am talk New Testament.

There were present on one occasion with the Saviour, some that told him of the Galileans, whose blood Pilate had mingled with their sacrifices. The may think it unworthy of your attention as a man. aviour said to them:—"Suppose ye that these Gal- I say, it is worthy of your attention as a man. ileans were sinners above all the Galile ns, because they suffered such things? I tell you, nay; but except ye repent, ye shall all likewise perish."

Now, my friends, we have together commenced the new year as sinners; and some of us, it is to be feared, as impenitent sinners, that have not yet exercised godly sorrow on account of our sins. What is to be done in regard to sin; and what is the propriety of exercising repentance in regard to sin at the commencement of the new year?

In regard to what has to be done, you cannot change the past. That is fixed as the throne of God, and is not to be reversed. The thing done cannot be undone; but the record of it is eternal, and God can call it up at any moment. What can be done in regard to it? Very much of the wrong you have done through your sins cannot be renaired by any power of yourself, and will not be done by any power of God Almighty. It is a fixed fact in its results. The man that has murdered another man cannot by repentance recall the dead man to life again. The man who has led one astray from the paths of innocence, can ot restore isnocence to

What can be done then in regard to sin? These things may be done: You can exercise godly sor- acquire fame, they will be saved. There is some row in regard to these sins. You can bring those conception of this matter in your minds. Take your sins before God, imploring forgiveness. You can do another thing. There are some evils you can consist the state of the saved. There is some your minds. Take your minds. Take your minds. Take your minds are some evils you can consist you can be done is done at the beginning of this manner. repair. Though you cannot restore the dead man new year? from his grave, or restore innocence to those made guilty, yet if you have ruined a neighbor, you can repair the wrong. If you have cleated him, you can acknowledge it and make reparation. If you man can doubt the possibility that before the next have defrauded the government, there is a conscience new year he may be in his grave. But there is nodepository in the government to receive money in acknowledgment. If you have slandered a man, you can go and face the wrong you have done, and it may be—yet not so slight as you suppose. When attempt to arrest its progress in the community.

There is another thing you can do. If you cannot repair the wrong to the individual; if the man you have ruined is in the grave: if the young man you have made an infidel cannot now be reformed, can do another thing-what Saul of Tarsus did. He had persecuted the Church, and though he could not recall the martyred ones from the grave, after he had sent them to eternity, he could yet go they themselves are mortal. Here we stand at the beginning of a new year. Our friends had started with us the last year, and now they are gone: we others from death by referring them to the Saviour. So, though you have done evil in the way you cannot repair, yet, by a life of piety and devotion to the truth of God, you may endeavor to extend truth in the world where you have spread error, and save thousands from wrong where you have ruined others. This may be done at the commencement of the new

First, because God has given that year to you that you might have a longer term of probation. God sorrow through which you have passed; yet, with year, and you would have gone unpardoned into the eternal world; but He has spared you, among other purposes, for this one—that you might have a day of grace, an opportunity for repentance of your sins.

You have need a seen so the doct and sorrow through which you have passed; yet, with the brightness at the beginning of the year, that darkness has passed away, and the light streams upon your path. The most beautiful object in creation I know of is, in these frosty mornings, the clear, they have need to be a sorrow through which you have passed; yet, with the brightness at the beginning of the year, that darkness has passed away, and the light streams upon your path. The most beautiful object in creation I would be a sorrow through which you have passed; yet, with the brightness at the beginning of the year, that darkness has passed away, and the light streams upon your path. The most beautiful object in creation I would be a sorrow through which you have passed; yet, with the brightness at the beginning of the year, that darkness has passed away, and the light streams upon your path. The most beautiful object in creation in the year and you have sorrow through which you have passed; yet, with the brightness at the beginning of the year, that darkness has passed away, and the light streams upon your path. The most beautiful object in creation in the year and you have been accounted to the year. You may judge the importance of these laws in the Divine mind, comparatively, by the circumstances under which they were given. It was not a trivial affair; it did not occur under ordinary circumstances. It was not in the stillness of morning, nor in good out of evil in any way. You have made the darkness of the night is gone, that the darkness of the dark night is gone, that the darkness of the dark night is gone, the target to the service of the world. the evening; but when God wakened up a great experiment with regard to the service of the world,

Another reason why you should begin the year with repentance of your sins is, to check the formaion of bad habits that might ruin you. It is a sad thought that there are many young men in this city who are already in the way of forming bad habits which may lead this year to their eternal ruin; but which, if checked at the beginning of the year, will be to their everlas ing welfare. That had habit has not yet seized so strongly upon you, that it may not be broken off. It may have been gaining strength for months past. You can hardly rell when it began. You can see that it is growing upon you, increasing day by day. By the end of this year, if you live, it may have become so riveted upon your soul that nothing can ever detach it.

Now, at the beginning of the year, I may venture to say there is not one I am addressing who cannot break off a bad habit; and hence I call upon you with a message from God this morning to repent of your sins and break off from the evil habit which you may have formed.

IV. The fourth thing I utter to you to-day as a message from God is to believe in Jesus Christ, to exercise faith in the Saviour. I come to you with that message from God. Do not doubt it is a message from God addressed to you at the beginning of this year.

Hear what He has said: "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." That is so. Hear also what He says: "He that believeth not shall be damned." That is so.

Hear again: "He that believeth on the Son hath life: he that believeth not the Son shall not see life, but the wrath of God abideth on him."

Now, to whom is this said? To what class of persons is it addressed? To no particular class of individuals; to the old man, to the middle-aged man, to the young man and to the child. Is it addressed to the deeply depraved and degraded in the world? Is it addressed to the poor ones? It is addressed alike to the degraded, the poor, the ignorant, and to the gay, the rich, the learned, the prosperous, the mourner, and the self-righteous, as a nessage from God to each man. A message from God addressed to you at the beginning of the new year to believe in the Lord Jesus Christ. I cannot doubt that this is a message God addresses to you.

Why should I make it prominent on this occasion, at the beginning of the year, as a message from God? I will tell you. The saddest thing, my friends, in the remembrance of the past year, is the remembrance that you are not a Christian, that you have not faith in Jesus Christ. The suddest thing, I say, is not that you have been disappointed, that you have been thwarted in your pleasures, that you have been sick, that you have been in danger, that you have been called to part with beloved friends, to part, may be, with property, that the world has been very dark to you in reference to your future prospects,—the saddest thing is, you have passed through another year without faith in the Son of God; entered on a new year without knowing that you have given your heart to the Saviour who died for the children of men.

That proves another sad thing for you—that the prospect that you will ever become a Christian is diminishing rapidly. Year by year, day by day, to all human appearances, the prospect is dying out that you will ever be a Christian, and ever give your heart to the Saviour.

Time was, in the recollection of most whom I address, when the name of the Saviour found a response in their hearts; when, as little children, they loved to read the story of the birth and life, and the sufferings of the Redeemer; when they listened with interest to the school-teacher, or minister, or parent, wonderfully telling that Jesus was born, and lived, and suffered, and died; when the cradle-hymn was sung by their mother, and their hearts were tender, and their eyes were immediately suffused with tears, with thinking on the sufferings of the Son of God. Oh, that these things could be re-called! Oh, that your hearts may be awakened this morning to the feelings you have had in other days, to the old interest you have felt in the name of Jesus, in the birth of the Saviour, in the work of the Saviour, in the death of the Saviour! But that, ing to you in this manner, with this sincere earnest ness, you may be smiling upon it. When I recall the scenes of childhood, of the Sunday-school, you

You were right when you were a child; you are wrong now. You were right when these things drew tears from your eyes; you are wrong now, when your heart is dry and hardened. And what I say s, these things are growing worse and worse, year by year; that your minds are less impressible than a year ago. The dark prospect this morning is, you will go through the year without knowing Christ; ever unpardoned.

V. The fifth message I have from God this morning is, to prepare to die! I cannot doubt that is a message from God to you. It is so often mentioned in the Scriptures, "Watch, for ye know not what hour your Lord doth come!" God speaks thus to us, "Prepare to meet thy God!" It is a direct command addressed to the children of men. "Prepare to meet thy God!"

Why should this be brought before you at the beginning of the new year? I need not dwell upon the cause; the thing itself is right. You should be prepared to meet God! I feel that something is neessary for us to prepare to meet God -to enter into the eternal world. You have your own views on that deluded and degraded one. You cannot go the subject. Some, by morality, honesty, amiable-ness, think they may be prepared to meet God. Some foolishly imagine that if they become rich, or you go to the actuary of a Life Insurance Company tell him your age, and ask him to state what is the probability that you will die during the year 1807, and what amount of premium you will require for a definite insurance on your life, he will state, with very great accuracy, the probability. You may die in one year or another, in five years, or in one hundred, but the average probability can be accurately foretold.

VI. I have one fact more as a me-sage from God and that is, that you are INVITED to repent. He invites you to come to Him to secure eternal life. 1 need not refer you to the Scriptures. "Ho, every one that thirsteth, come ye to the waters." Spirit and the Bride say, Come. And let him that heareth say, Come. And let him that is athirst come. And whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely."

The past year may have been one of darkness. You may not see much in it to look upon with pleasure. There may have been scenes of trouble and sun is about to rise upon the earth, and those scenes of darkness are to pass away. So, my friends, at 1052-ly the beginning of the new year, if the last year has been an unhappy one with you, if there are cold shadows resting upon it, there is a bright star for each of us, gloriously rivalling the brightness of the morning-star, leading on the day of the new year: and under the auspices of that bright light that arose upon each of us to-day-that joyous, jubilant, exalted beauty—you enter upon the new year. God in His mercy guide you with the star of day, lead you to this life in the beginning of the year, and, under His guidance, make you to be led in the path of life until you have reached the light of eternal day, and rejoice with the angelic hosts above.

OBITUARY.

Died. at his late residence in Juniata Co., Pa., January 7th, the Hon. JOHN BEALE in the 69th year of his age. Early in life, the deceased espoused the cause of truth and righteousness, by a profession of faith in Jesus. He creditably filled several places of public trust in his County and State. In later years his aim and efforts were to live nearer to God. and he did it. As death approached, he gave a free expression of his hopes. They were founded on the infinite merits of Jesus Christ and through Him he triumphed in the day of his death. Steening in Jesus he will arise to life imthe day of his death. Sleeping in Jesus, he will arise to life immortal.
