Two editions will be published; one having the American ngering, and the other the European. Persons ordering shoul oe careful to designate which is wanted.

This important work, which has been so long in preparation will be ready early in October. It is modern, original, and com-plete. Coming after so many others upon the same subject, it conains that which has proved of value in them, and adds many ner estures, which, though they have never before been published have been thoroughly tested in private teaching, and are of great value. Some of them have long been known to the best teachers, while others are quite novel, being comparatively unknown. Of the latter class are the Accent Exercises, invented by Mr. Mason, which form the most important improvement in the art of teaching which has been introduced for many years. The method teacher the art of fingering more fully than any previous work, introducing new modes of overcoming difficulties, elucidating principles by co pious analysis, and thus enabling the learner to understand them easily. It gives very important and hitherto needed directions in regard to training the hand. It teaches the true mode of accom panying vocal music, both sacred and secular, and imparts suffi-cient instruction in harmony for those who wish to extemporize interludes and other short passages. Its s lection of pieces for practice is large and very pleasing, for not a single composition has been admitted that is not really attractive. These pieces are arranged progressively from the simplest Recreation, adapted to a beginner, up to a highly-wrought and delightful Andante, by Mo zart, which forms a fitting climax to the whole. The work is remarkable also for its omissions; for difficulties are carefully excluded until the learner is prepared for them. It furnishes the cessary material, and shows how to train pupils in the mos thorough manner, so that those who follow its directions faithfully will gain artistic proficiency in a much shorter time, and with vastly less labor than usually been required.
