NEW LIFE OF CHRIST.

The great prominence given in modern literature to the Person of Christ, in distinction from the abstract doctrinal and purely spiritual views which formerly prevailed, and the sudden and impressive entrance of this divine Person on the field of general literature, where he had scarcely been recognized before, has often been remarked.

The one before us by Mr. Eddy, is introduced to the reader in an essay, in the glowing, energetic and significant style of Rev. Dr. Storrs, of Brooklyn, in which the modern study of the Life of Christ is described as the effort of the Church under the impulse of the Spirit, to get into closer sympathy with the living Redeemer.

FLEETWOOD'S LIFE OF CHRIST has been before the public for more than half a century. Within that time the work of criticism, both skeptical and evangelical, has been pressed forth with unexampled and untiring severity.

In the meanwhile the simple, straight-forward narrative and the plain, practical exposition of Fleetwood is read with as much interest and profit by the common people as ever.

JUVENILES.

ALMOST A NUN, by Mrs. McNair Wright, is the nearest approach to a sensational story that our PUBLICATION COMMITTEE have as yet ventured on; but while they have given us a book of real and somewhat novel interest, they have kept well within the limits of verisimilitude and of Christian propriety.

DR. LESLIE'S BOYS is designed to show the effects of Christian training upon three boys, of quite diverse traits of character. Providence aids in the work by nearly overwhelming one of them in a storm at sea, to which he was exposed through his disobedience.

THE NEW YORK NEEDLE-WOMAN from the same author, is a touching story of lowly life, made more than commonly wretched by drunkenness and crime, and of the light brought into it by the influence of a pious neighbor, poor in everything but the power of blessing others which grace confers. It shows what the pious poor can do for each other.

CLIFF HUT and WILD ROSES are smaller volumes—the portion of the younger class of readers. PUBLICATION COMMITTEE.

FERN'S HOLLOW is one of the best of juvenile stories, written with decided power of description and with keen and intelligent sympathy with the rural poor of Great Britain. It illustrates the power of the gospel when received with simplicity under great trials and unfavorable circumstances, particularly the triumph of a forgiving spirit in the face of uncomon provocations.

THE ANCIENT SCHOOLMASTER by Dr. Blackburn is the story of Moses, paraphrased and accompanied with much valuable and pleasantly conveyed information about the ceremonial and moral law, Pharisaism, &c. THE GOLDEN RULE is a collection of short stories. All these are from the Publication Board of the other branch.

TICKNOR & FIELDS have just issued, in exceedingly tasteful form, uniform editions of FARMING for Boys, by the author of Ten Acres Enough; and the BUTTERFLY HUNTERS, by Helen S. Conant. The former is one of the most effective pieces of writing for the young in all extant juvenile literature. Life on a farm is presented in all its picturesque and attractive sides to boys. Not only what farming is, but what it ought to be, is told in that ingenious way that rivets the interest of the youthful reader.

POEMS.

THE NEW POEMS by OWEN MEREDITH (Robert Lytton) in two elegant 18mo. volumes, from Ticknor & Fields, justly claim a high place in this branch of literature. The plan of the writer is almost that of a World Epic. Under the comprehensive title of "Chronicles and Characters, he throws into verse, specimens of the life and the thought, the literature and the history of every age of the world. It is a daring enterprise, to represent legendary, classical, oriental, Christian and modern life in verse which shall not merely tell the separate stories, but reflect the diverse spirit of the times. It would be too much for almost any human genius to expect to achieve. But it is a great performance. Much of it is written in a popular vein, but as a whole, it is addressed rather to the scholar and thoughtful. The language is generally full of significance, repaying study; the metres are endlessly varied and the poetry as such is of a high and sometimes extraordinary, though unequal measure of excellence. The most interesting piece to readers in this country is "Atlantis," in which the sympathies of this continent of a noble house of England with the objects of our recent struggle are uttered with an unreserved freedom as was ever done by our own Whittier, Boker or Lowell. He thus recognizes and glorifies our position as a nation:

The destinies of our her ministers Who dips in the dim light of setting sun The spacious skirts of that vast robe of hers, That widens ever in the wondrous West; But on her sceptre shines the morning star Where she sings mysterious oracles. In her large lap, Jove's Bird hath built his nest, And the great Ocean stream orbicular Goeth about to girdle her strong breast. Where the nursing hopes of times are prest.

HEADLEY'S LIFE OF GRANT (Hon. John T. Headley) is a straight-forward, graphic, popular narrative of this hero of our late war, who bids fair to hold a high place among the representative men of America. It is chiefly occupied in rehearsing his career in the late war, and it presents the grand and memorable facts in a very intelligible readable form, accompanied with a number of very fine engravings, the whole being printed and bound in the most substantial and attractive manner. Published by E. B. Treat & Co., New York.
