Box 5057 Boston, Mass. SPECIAL NOTICE. -As a matter, of convenience

From A. S. BARNES & Co., N. Y., we have received J. Madison Watson's INDEPENDENT FOURTH READER, comprising instructions in Practical Elocution, and Select Readings. The instructions in articulation are full and valuable. The extracts are of good literary and moral quality and the volume is very tastefully executed. Also J. Dorman Steele, of Elmira's FOURTEEN WEEKS COURSE IN ASTRONOMY; a charming volume, which both in matter and form is well calculated to promote the end of the author-not the information of scientific men, but the inspiration of youth. It is fully up to the present state of the science, and the illustrations are striking and beautiful. S. S. Apparatus.

We have from the pen of REV. CHARLES E. KNOX, of Bloomfield, N. J., and the press of RANDOLPH, a Series of Books on S. S. instruction, based upon such principles and so handled that they must secure the regard of all interested in a thorough training of the young in the sacred word. These Text Books, five in number, proceed upon the important idea of a regular graduation in the course of S. S. teaching, covering five years, and reaching from the period of leaving the Infant School, to the entrance into the Bible Class. Thus, at first, only simple narrative is given for the lesson, then discourse and doctrine are gradually interwoven, until at last these constitute nearly the whole. Much stress is justly laid upon the use of the memory, and reviewing at proper intervals is provided for. Those who would avoid a desultory way of spending the precious Sabbath and the time and energies devoted to the religious training of the young should not overlook these volumes. The accompanying pamphlet, showing how all the five lessons going on at once among graded classes, may be brought into connection and be used by the Superintendent in enforcing a single lesson in the whole school, is very ingenious and answers a serious objection to the graded system.
