Law; Form and Substance and Internal Relations of the Law; Israel under the Covenant of Law; The Economical Aspect and Defects of the Law; Relation to it of Psalms and Prophets; Problem with which the Old Testament Closed; Relation of Law to Christ; to the Constitution, &c., of the Christian Church; Reintroduction of Law into the New Test. Church. The Supplementary Dissertations are upon The Double Form of the Decalogue, The Historical Element in God's Revelations of Truth and Duty, and Whether the Spirit of Revenge is Countenanced in the Writings of the Old Testament. Last of all is an Exposition of the most important passages on the Law in St. Paul's Epistles. Thus the whole subject comes into view and is discussed with grasp and breadth of thought, and command of authorities and effective refutation of current errors. It is very elegantly printed, has two indices and 484 8vo. pages, and is published by CARTER at $3.50, and for sale at the Presbyterian House.

GEORGE B. CHEEVER'S LECTURES ON PILGRIM'S PROGRESS AND THE LIFE AND TIMES OF BUNYAN, is a work of real genius and of warm and genial Christian sympathy with the purpose of the dreamer. It is a double beam of light from the intellect and fancy of two highly gifted and quaint, but very different men. Next to the Bible, Pilgrim's Progress seems to be an inexhaustible mine for practical uses in and out of the pulpit. Two of our prominent city ministers are now lecturing upon it with great success. The re-issue of these lectures, of more than twenty years ago, is a welcome and appropriate event. They are in large type. 12mo. pp. 514.

SCOTIA'S BARDS.

In this volume of choice contents and choice externals there is enough to warm every Scotchman's blood with national pride, and to kindle delight in his eye. An untold wealth of memories of country, home and church, such as perhaps no other narrow tract of earth possesses, is embodied and embalmed in these deathless verses. A wreath of poetry has been woven for almost every pass and loch and headland; and the severer features of Scotland's scenery, as well as her history, have been mellowed by romance and song. It is from Scotland too, that literature has derived much of its religious element. Witness Burns' Cottar's Saturday Night; Thomson's Hymn (at the close of The Seasons); Graham's Sabbath; Logan's Hymns, &c. The volume is made up of selections, in which a large space is given to poets of merit, little known to the general public. The reality of Ossian and the truthfulness of Macpherson's claim to be the translator of veritable and ancient Gaelic poems is said by the editor to be established. Mr. Lincoln's favorite piece, commencing, "Oh, why should the spirit of mortal be proud?" is given in full, with some account of the author, William Knox, who died 1825, and others of his pieces are given.

The volume is elegantly and profusely illustrated, and bound in the most handsome and substantial manner. 8vo. pp. 363, gilt cloth. $4.50.

LUOY LARCOM is best known to the public by two things,—her Poem, "Hannah Binding Shoes," and her connection with "Our Young Folks." The Poem and others of the same calibre and character, are issued from the press of FIELDS, OSGOOD & Co. in a neat volume. (POEMS BY LUOY LARCOM.) The author sings in a key neither very high nor very low. There is a combination and recombination of the usual poetic elements—sea, mountains, sunshine, spring, flowers and trees. But there is in her favor—she beholds all things devoutly. You find few striking thoughts and the arrangement of the Poems is not ever fine—but to balance these defects you have the same qualities which made Katrina sell so largely and which after all will justify Whittier's good opinion.

The same publishers, FIELDS & OSGOOD have issued a new volume of JAMES RUSSELL LOWELL'S Poems, entitled: UNDER THE WILLOWS, so called from the name of the first piece. We regard Lowell as one of the truest poetical geniuses of our country. With less of polish and gentle refinement than Longfellow, and less of lofty purity than Whittier, there is more intensity, more glow of poetic fervor in him than in either of the others. The first poem, "Under the Willows," is one of the finest summer pieces in any language; and few Lyrical Odes from Pindar down, can vie with the truly grand "Commemorative Ode," at the close. We are sorry we cannot always endorse the religious sentiments, which are rather hinted than uttered and that we cannot reckon Mr. Lowell as exactly equal in this regard to some of the classic poets of less enlightened times. Cloth, gilt top. 8vo. pp. 280. $2.

THE GATES' AJAR, by ELIZABETH STUART PHELPS, describes, in its own intensely individual way, and in the form of an autobiography, the agonies of a great bereavement, repining and rebelling against every ordinary means of consolation, but at last yielding to calm and happy submission, through the wise and cautious approaches of an intelligent Christian sympathy. It is a kind of prose, in Memoriam, in its way quite as poetic as Tennyson, but more desperate in its grief, and more positively Christian in its issue. 16mo. pp. 246. $1.50.

MADAME TERESE.

This is the first of a series of French Tales, to the joint work, in the original of two writers; EREKMAN and CHATEAUN. The heroine of the story is a French woman, who in the ardor of her Republican zeal has followed the patriot army, in the conflicts of 1793, as a cantiniere, or daughter of the regiment. The style is wonderfully fresh, simple and graphic, and the story unlike a vast multitude of French fictions, as healthful and pure. It introduces the reader to French village life, and its details, including children, animals and village gossips, while its terribly vivid and life-like descriptions of battles, are of such peculiar character as to interest children and adults alike. The engravings have a coarse and ill defined appearance, as if from worn plates. (Another of the series, The Conscript, is in press.) 12mo. Cloth. pp. 289. $1.50.

MADAME DE PRESSEUSE'S "ROSA," is one of those stories which we single out as "charming." It gives the every-day life of one of those children, so trying and yet so entertaining, who, without being "bad," but on the contrary amiable and generous, are yet from inborn heedlessness and self-confidence, ever getting themselves and others into difficulties, but whose kind and skilful friends are ever at hand to extricate them. The power of love to cure the crookedness of child-nature is beautifully exemplified. The scenes, incidents and episodes are described with all the felicity of expression of the best French writers. 16mo. pp. 366 Illustrated. Presbyterian Board.

HILLSBORO' FARMS, by Sophia Dickenson Cobb, and Dr. HOWELL'S FAMILY, by Mrs. N. B. Goodwin, author of "Madge," &c., (Boston, Lee & Shepard,) have several points of resemblance. They are alike in style, in general views of life, in appearance of binding—and especially in having ladies as authors. Our space does not allow of any extended criticism further than this—that of the two, "Dr. Howell's Family" possesses the most power, and the sketching in it is done with a freer hand. It is taken by this fact out of the dull range of "unexceptionable" literature and its moral is made capable of more popular application. It aims to contrast genuine Christianity with selfish worldliness, and we should say that its success therein, though not brilliant, is very fair. George McDonald is a hard competitor to any one in such a trial.

Of "Hillsboro' Farm" one cannot be, therefore, expected to write with extacy. It is far better, however, than highly seasoned trash, for it is pure and truthful. It compares more nearly to an artist's study from a quiet spot, than to an ambitious academy piece. Taken together, the two books will do good, each in its way—and that way is nearly the same. While they are unexciting, they still keep up the interest of a reader.

LION BEN is one of those original, racy and every way healthful stories that not infrequently make their appearance in juvenile literature, like a meteor among the soberer stars. Without being a religious story, it is in every respect, save the mention of drinking customs of former times without remark, on the side of sound morals and right principle. Especially is it good reading for those who contemplate matrimony in these times of unwholesome social ambition. It is the first of "The Elm Island Series," by Rev. ELIJAH KELLOGG. Published by LEE & SHEPARD. $1.25.

PERIODICALS AND PAMPHLETS.

HOURS AT HOME for December opens with No. 1 of Prof. Porter's Series on Books and Reading. Besides continuations of the New Stories "Motherless Girls," and "Christopher Kroy," and of "The Chaplet of Pearls," it contains, Poetry by Miss Josephine Pollard, "The Rivelet," and a Translation in very difficult, but graceful metre, from the German of Mrs. Meta Heusser Schweitzer: "Christ in Glory;" Humorous pieces by Rev. T. D. Talmage, on Hobbies, and by C. H. Webb, on "Children and their Savings." Also, A South American Statesman. (Col. Sarmento), A Grain of Sand, Our College Minutes, Evening at Cape Ann, The London Money Market, (by James Greenwood), Leisure Moments, Books and Authors abroad, Literature of the Day. The topics, as will be seen, are greatly varied, the articles are short, and a large amount of valuable information is conveyed in an attractive form. CHARLES SCRIBNER & Co. N. Y. $3 a year.

With great promptness, the publishers have issued the entire volume of OUR YOUNG FOLKS for 1868, beautifully bound in cloth. Its numerous and elegant illustrations make it shine like a flower garden, as one turns the leaves; and among its entertaining variety of articles, we have evidence that the highest order of literary talent can be enlisted for the children's use. The Serial Story: Cast Away in the Cold, is enough to make any Magazine's fortune; to say nothing of William Henry's Letters to his Grandmother, "How June met Mr. Linkum," "Round the Evening Lamp," the Music and all the rest. Price $3.50.
