Bob Gornall

Just what Bob has in mind for this year's council can be summed up in these few words: "We'll do our best to rectify any problems which may come up and also to operate for the students and not for individual recognition." Bob's hopes for the Council are mainly that it be efficient, respected, and

'Round the Town

By Phyllis Stadler

Let's start off by wishing Happy Birthday to Honey Greenlee, who celebrated on September 28 and to Ronnie (Chief) Thomas, who celebrated on October 3. "Happy Birthday!" kids.

What's this about Jerry Adler trading his beautiful Mercury convertible in for a Ford sedan?

It looks like quite a large group from Behrend are going down to the main campus for the Homecoming Game. A few of them include: Bill Mong, Raleigh Chesley, Jack Mallory, John Kolpien, Bill Schweitzer, Don McLaughlin, Phyllis Stadler, Gilbert Keinath, Clark Jamison, and Dick Webster.

Gary Stultz went down to New Wilmington on October 1 to see the Westminster-Thiel football game. I hear he saw a few of the dorm girls down there.

Honey Greenlee visited Edinboro State Teacher's College, her old Alma Mater, on September 24 for a sorority breakfast and a football game. And speaking of Honey, have you noticed that she drives her jeep to school?

Somebody is losing a lot of friends. He passed a lot of traffic tickets out in the parking lot the other day. Now maybe a few people will know where not to park. It couldn't be that our traffic cop is Fred Loell?

Did you know that Mary Ann Wasilewski gets up at 3:00 A. M. to do her homework? And I'm not kidding, either.

I'm glad to see a few of us do something exciting on week ends. Chuck Hickin and Don Godfrey went to Cleveland at the beginning of the month to see the Ice Capades.

Bob Meehan is going to a dance at the Andrews School for Girls on October 15. And Bob Harris goes to Pittsburg every weekend to see his girl friend.

Jeanette Flory was one of the few girls who were playing it safe during Freshman Customs. I guess she didn't want an egg shampoo or lipstick all over her face like most of us. Those sophomore boys were really mean.

Sonya Weidner wants you all to know that she bought a Penn State sweatshirt the other day.

Did you see the beautiful ring that Paul Moon gave his girl on October 5? It's beautiful! "Congratulations," Paul!

utilized by the student body.

The few paragraphs above have just touched the surface of Bob's views and accomplishments. Get to know your Student Council leader; his philosophy of life is fascinating.

Dorm Council News

Dorm Council is once more in full swing with its newly elected officers and members. They are: Gretchen Muth, president; Judy Young, vice president; Mary Lou Womer, secretary-treasurer; Harriet Szatkowski, Loretta Terlizzi, Donna Tokar, Marilyn Pringle, and Sue Hansen. The girls are kept busy seeing that things are organized around the dorm.

Some of their duties include: seeing that the dorm is quiet during study hours, checking rooms for neatness, and marking the names of the offenders in their little black books. Mrs. Helen Longnecker sees to it that information is transmitted between the dorm students and the administration.

Along with their other duties, the Council also plans social functions such as the dance held Saturday, October 8, in Erie Hall. There will also be other activities throughout the year in which they will lend a hand.

The girls should be commended on a big job well done.

Dorm Chatter

By Eileen Kowalczyk

Straight from the dorm come these flashes:

Bonnie Hugus, a cute freshman, has been getting the rush from two sophomore boys on campus. Why not let the other girls in on your secret, Bonnie?

The girls in the dorm have been complaining about our popular gal, Donna Tokar. Seems that Donna ties up the phone with all her phone calls.

Christmas was rushed a little this year. Several weeks ago Judy Young dressed as Santa Claus and traveled to all the rooms with her pack on her back wishing everyone a Merry Christmas.

If anyone is wondering what all the confusion in the dorm was the other night, ask the girls in the eight girl suite. It seems Gretchen Muth entertained them with her dancing across the tops of the bunks. Gretch looked real "collegiate" (How about that, Marilyn?) with a scarf tied turban style around her head and a tennis racket as a sword. Not too funny!

Mrs. Ann Ring, our housekeeper, has taken up a new profession as a beautician. Her first customers were Harriet Szatkowski and Dot Blazer.

Nancy Newman was the happiest girl in the dorm, by far, the other night after she received a phone call from her boyfriend in California.

What is this we hear about Judy Young and her golfing? Tell us about it sometime, Judy.

How about the night Dot Blazer was exploring the roof of the dorm?

Then there was the night Eileen Kowalczyk and Janie McCreary dressed up for their preview of the Homecoming Dance. Frankly, it looked more like a preview for Duffy's Tavern, what do you think, girls?

Marilyn Pringle, Linda Hamer, and Judy Young run for mail call everyday (the first ones to get there). Maybe they miss Paul, Bill, and Bill (respectively) who are all serving their country in the armed forces. MAYBE!

Bye till next time.

Featuring Jay Roling-Virtuoso

By Beverly Smith

Do you have a picture in your mind of what you think a violinist should look like? Now compare that picture with Jay Roling, who is an accomplished violinist. They really don't look too much alike, do they?

Jay, unlike most young boys, always wanted to play the violin. He received his first violin for Christmas the year he was in eighth grade. When he took it to school he was told he would never play because of a bad ear. Mr. Howard Schilken was his first teacher, and after Jay worked with him for six months he achieved Concert Master of Roosevelt Junior High School. After he went to Academy, Jay played third chair, and very shortly became Concert Master there.

When he was in the tenth grade, Jay played in the Junior Philharmonic under the direction of Fritz Mahler. Last year, because of the help and guidance of Mr. William Hover, he obtained an audition from Dr. Sample, the director of Erie's Philharmonic Orchestra, and for the past year has played second violin with the organization.

Jay's favorite selections are "Hot Canary" by Paul Nero, and "Meditation" from Thais by Massere. The hardest piece he has ever played is Mendelssohn's "Violin Concerto."

The violin Jay uses today was given to him two years ago by Mr. Schilken. It is an original Hopf, which Mr. Schilken played for the Cleveland Philharmonic. Though it was a dearly treasured item because of its background, he gave it to Jay as a gift. The violin was made in 1790 and brought to America before the War of 1812. One day during the war, the British ransacked the house of the owner. Not wanting the British to seize his prized possession, he put the violin in a burlap bag and walked out with it as his sole possession. The strategy worked; the British did not take it from him. However, during the process, the violin received a few injuries in the belly (back). Despite this, it has only been repaired once, in 1910.

Jay likes to play the violin strictly as a hobby. He would like, however, to continue playing for the Philharmonic. Jay would rather play for the public than for his friends—as he says, "They are much too civilized." We do know that his friends will dispute that statement.

Jay and his violin have taken part in many activities, namely: Duffy's Tavern, when Chuck Agner and he imitated the Liberaces, and, on the more serious side, at Eastertime he played "Ave Maria."

You can usually find Jay in the cafeteria pondering over the arrangements for the Behrend Singers. He is now working on some Penn State songs. Jay, with the help of his violin, is directing the chorus, and he seems quite hopeful for the coming events.

Nittany Cub Gets Rolling

The Nittany Cub staff will have the following organization, according to Mr. Thurbon, student newspaper advisor.

All staff members automatically qualify for pins at the end of the school year, but in order to become full-fledged members eligible to receive pins they must meet certain requirements.

Persons holding editorial positions during the term rate pins for the type of work they do. The writers, however, will be expected to turn in and have published in the Cub a definite number of column inches of copy by the time the last edition comes out. The exact number will be posted in the Cub office at an early date.

Students hoping to qualify as business staff members will be expected to procure from local merchants a minimum of seven ads each. Forms for this purpose are available in the Cub office.

Mr. Patterson, professor of mathematics, has kindly consented to handle most of the photographic work for the paper, but occasional art work, such as cartooning and the like, may be needed and a student may find it possible to become a staff member and thereby rate a pin through this type of contribution.

player, and ping-pong player. Last but not least there is Melvin Fisher who is an ardent square dancing and Euchre fan.

By the way, Mary Jane and Melvin are going down to Penn State on the thirteenth and fourteenth of October. Have fun, kids!

Pat Peck (yours truly) is auditing courses in Chem 3 and Math 800 in order to get into nursing school next fall.

Good luck, all!
