

Behrend Terra Firma

By Yogi Bear

There has been a noticeable migration from Erie Hall's ping-pong tables to the library; could semester grades reaching the home front have anything to do with this?

There is a new girl on campus with beautiful gray eyes — each male is permitted three tries to guess that her name is— Jill . . . John, alias Clyde, Beatty has found his new residence quite satisfactory. Does a Chevy convertible have anything to do with this, John?

Bulletin: Walt Parker, a member of the infamous Organization, has recently confided in a few intimates that there will be a "new" Walt Parker . . . Mary Kintz has quite a list of admirers . . . The Stull Hall boys are officially gone now, but Mrs. Stull won't forget them until her last mouse trap is sprung . . . Ann Ring is holding her own classes for the dorm girls—what is the subject, Mrs. Ring?

The recent dismissal of Sally Simon from the Behrend Library was only temporary, for she is again heading the social hour at the local book haven . . . Bob Scott still believes that classes start at twenty after . . . Julie Horton and Judy Schewig are the only new members of analytic geometry class, yet the classroom is filled . . . Why does Dianne Reynolds suddenly make a trip home every week end?

Bill Curtis claims he couldn't be busier. It seems Bill has parts in two plays: Behrend's coming attraction of "Junior Miss" and Lawrence Park's production of "My Fair Lady" . . . Dr. Smith was the life of the party at the recent faculty wives' soiree . . . What is this rumor about Mr. Lane buying air wicks for his literature class? . . . Lee Wnuk, are you or aren't you taking philosophy?

Margie Rex recently received notice of a demerit she has earned for disobeying dorm rule number twenty-four. This is strange because there are only twenty-three regulations!

Here is a question: Was the Mardi Gras as much fun as Mr. Balmer's chemistry labs? . . . One would think a four point was nothing at all if consulting Pat Hagan.

Since Pat Wachtel's party in Pittsburgh, Pat Williams has been seen more frequently around the dorm. Who's the lucky girl, Pat? . . . Debbie Gold chose Music 6 as an elective this semester . . . A request: John P., will you please shave? That beard is too reminiscent of finals!

This column becomes shorter every edition; will somebody please do something scandalous?

Edwards Makes Smashing Visit

By Mike Eccles

Bob "Egor" Edwards has a habit of doing the fantastic, and Thursday, January 22, was no exception. On that night, cold sober, as he started to enter an establishment dealing in bottled spirits, he tripped, his body hurling through a thick plate glass window. A spine-tingling crash found Bob's upper half lying in the store, his posterior protruding outside. His arm came up to protect his neck as large, jagged spears of glass rained all about him. Though it seemed like hours before the final piece dropped, the entire episode actually took place in about five seconds.

The dumbfounded clerk timidly inspected Egor, expecting to see a body more dead than alive. The heavy winter coat he was wearing had large gashes where the heavy knife-like staves of glass had cut it clean as a saber.

I rushed through the window to Bob's side, advising him not to sign anything till he saw his lawyer, but he courageously struggled to his feet, mounds of glass surrounding him. Casually he told the horrified clerk, "I just dropped in to see if John Rizzo was here."

Mardi Gras Carnival

was enclosed by a white picket fence and lit by Japanese lanterns, which enhanced the holiday atmosphere.

The advisors and the various Mardi Gras committees are to be congratulated for a very successful and entertaining evening.

Cooperation Asked On Safety Precautions

The Behrend Safety Committee, composed of Professors Werner, Campbell and Balmer, would like the student body and faculty to make a special effort in regard to smoking and other hazards around the buildings.

Recently the committee received word that Penn State University's policy on safety regulations is stressing stringent improvement; in fact, indications are that drastic steps may be necessary to safeguard careless smoking and other fire hazards.

"Any suggestions," states Chairman Werner, "on the part of students or faculty will be gladly considered. The committee members want it understood that they are not trying to dictate, merely enlist the cooperation of all concerned for the sake of everyone."
