Mr. Bedford's speech on the repeal of the income tax is one of many Circle K sponsored events put on for the benefit of intellectually alert students.

avoid the draft, the college student is "doing nothing . . . to have a winning war effort." We are not interested in winning the war, we are interested in ending it!

... a student feels he has a bright future which is the fulfillment of his life, he must realize that the future is open to him in great measure because of the country in which he lives. And if a student feels that our involvement in Viet Nam is justifiable, i. e., if he feels it is necessary for the security of our country, he should be perfectly willing to serve in the armed forces and therefore should not look "with disfavor . . . on the possible enactment of a Korea War type draft policy."

The fact that winning a war is based on production is as evident as the fact that we think it need be discussed. In a war effort, material productivity is more important than mental productivity which a college student might create. The things which contribute to winning a war are not learned in college when the war is over they have graduated long before. The things a college student can immediately contribute to a war effort are in industry or the armed forces. The college student in any other area is a non-producer as far as the war effort is concerned.
