

FOLK SINGER TO APPEAR AT BEHREND

Stanley Shepherd will appear at the Behrend Campus at 2:30 p.m. on Sunday, March 20, to present a program of West Indian folk songs. Shepherd forsakes his usual slide rule as a member of the Physics Department at Penn State to accompany himself on the guitar. He is a native of Jamaica, and provides a historical introduction to the melodious songs of his homeland.

Native folk songs of the West Indian isles form the basis of Shepherd's program. He illustrates the development of the folk forms from their original African roots through the West Indian melodies and their popular uses of today. Shepherd, a student of the Jamaican folk forms, is adept at explaining the origin of the familiar style and rhythm of the Caribbean folk idiom.

He studied in England, and returned to teach physics in his native land after receiving his degree. He later came to the United States, and did graduate work at the Kent State University, receiving his masters in 1959. Shepherd taught in Ohio and Alabama before coming to the Altoona Campus of Penn State. He was transferred to the University Park Campus in 1965.

He has presented programs throughout central Pennsylvania. His easy delivery and free style of introduction leads his audience with him from ballad to work song to Calypso, many of the songs being audience participation numbers.

This program is part of the Pennsylvania State University's Artists Series and will be presented in Erie Hall. The program will include such favorites as Brown Skin Girl, You Play de Game, She Takes All My Money, Mary Anne, and other numbers.

All Behrend students will be admitted free of charge.
