should be attended by first-line supervisors or those supervisors with more experience, even though at higher supervisory level, who have not been exposed to a similar intensive, concentrated, educational program. The advanced workshop is for those supervisors who are graduates of a five-day Penn State Basic Workshop, or others who can satisfy the admissions committee, in writing, that the previous training received is sufficient to qualify them for admission and to help assure their understanding of the planned subject matter. Topics will be explored in depth to provice problem-solving ideas and techniques which can be applied in industrial and business situations.

Some of the organizations which have previously been represented at these workshops include: Tammermill Paper Company, Jeneral Electric Company, Fennsylvania Electric Company, and the Camation Company.

ODE TO THE BEHRE'D PINE by Mr. Donaldson, Cont. Ed.

Oh Behrend Pine all green and round You stand there rooted to the ground So mute, so stately, tall and true. Do I detect a hue of blue?

Oh no, of course, that cannot be For as any fool can plainly see . You're Pine! At least that's what the customs deem.

Put are you really what you seem?

Through Customs Week as frosh pass you They tip their dinks of white and blue down through the years of all this folly With sophomores looking on so jolly You stand there smug and tall and green. But really—Are you what you seem?

'Tis true I have no axe to grind
It's just the facts I aim to find
As Doc Smith says with all her truths
You're not a Pine. You're really Spruce!

I.C.L.T.
