

developed extracurricular habits, and climaxed these by beating Kay, and locking her in the closet. The black eye he gave her should have gotten the Academy Award for best technicolor effects. Kay lost her sanity and took to gawking hysterically after airplanes. Once, fearing an air raid, she lost her footing on the window sill, and tumbled to her death. Some clod behind me tittered, "OH, ch. She's going to fall." She DID. I SCREAMED. It was the only genuine emotion provoked in me during the whole film.

So a leitmotiv (got that, music students?) of sorrow pervaded the soundtrack. The girls shuddered, "NO, no, she was my favorite character." The guys thanked their beards and murmured sagely, "She's really better off." Men are heartless.

The most heartless men of all, however, are the producer and director of this flick who inflicted (a pun?) these Vassar girls on us. They decreed that the girls should laugh thusly: Ha Haw Haw HEE. The sound is like fingernails on a blackboard. And they say endearing phrases like "Who'd a thunk it?" That phrase wasn't even in the book. The producer must have thought it added something. That's a laugh. Ha Haw Haw HEE.

"The Group" is a major breakthrough in cinematic art. A whole nation is paying to see what they would have switched off their televisions: soap opera a-go-go.

But don't get me wrong. I enjoyed the film. So did Time Magazine. Who'd a thunk it?

NEW CAMPUS

(Continued from Page 1)

increasing enrollment in four-year colleges is limiting the opportunities for admission of transfer students.

Two-year technical programs leading to an associate degree will not be offered this year at the Capitol Campus, but will continue to be offered at the Penn State Harrisburg Center at 2980 North 2nd St.

Applications for students wishing to begin their junior year at the Capitol

Campus may be obtained by writing to the Director of Admissions, 109 Willard Building, University Park, Penna., 16802.

In general, applicants for the undergraduate programs should have completed two years of studies in the liberal arts. Also, taken into consideration will be the quality of grades earned.

Applications for the graduate programs may be received by writing to the Dean of Graduate School, 101 Willard Building, University Park.

A total of 300 students is expected to be enrolled for the Fall Term, including approximately 200 students in the junior year programs, and 100 in graduate work.

A faculty for the Campus is now being recruited and names of members appointed will be announced at a later date, according to Herpel.

Penn State will make use of portions of the north complex of the Olmstead Air Force Base, which is being phased out. Facilities at the Base to be used by the University include a modern three-story main administration building with 192,000 square feet of usable space, and a 177-acre site.

* * * * *

STAFF

- Editor Bill Barney
- Feature Editor Ruth Brown
- Production Janis Puzar
- Sports Bob Dean
- Art. Gae Baker
- Reporters. John Beavers
Carol DeArment
Jan Kudlak
Jim Michaeli
Dave Pascale
- Typists Judy Fong
Beth Krasneske
Ellen Reep