

A LIFE'S DREAM

This is your on-the-spot Cub reporter bringing you an exclusive interview with Sam Senile, the oldest living student at Behrend Campus. Your reporter found Sam at his usual place in the cafeteria lunch line.

Reporter: Hi, Sam.. How's the line moving today?

Sam: Oh, about the same. A foot every hour or so.

Rep: Do you mind if I ask you some questions and put your answers in the campus paper?

Sam: No, go right ahead; it will give me something to read while I wait in line here.

Rep: Good. First of all, how old are you, Sam?

Sam: Eighty-six, Bob. I'll be eighty-seven in January.

Rep: Boy, that sure is old to be going to college. How old were you when you started?

Sam: Nineteen.

Rep: Nineteen??? What have you been doing for the last sixty-seven years?

Sam: Nothing, just standing here in this lunch line. Someday I'm going to get there.

Rep: I'm sure you will, Sam.

Sam: I hope so; I thought I was going to make it once during the Second World War, but then some kids got in front of me and I lost two years.

Rep: I'll tell you what, Sam; I know that kid up in front of the line, and I'm sure he'd let you in ahead of him. .

Sam: Would you really do that? That's been the dream of my life. I'd finally be able to die happy.

Sam, a new look of hope in his eyes, staggered up to the front of the line just in time for the cook to put a sign on the door, "Out to Lunch."

Oh, well next time you're in the cafeteria stop and say hello to Sam. He needs a friend.

READERS FORM WORKSHOP

High on the list of activities are the Behrend Readers. Susan Lancaster, Carol De Arment and George Miller participate in a weekly workshop Thursdays at common hour in Room ;20. Mrs. Falkenhagen, their advisor, is now discussing various speech techniques with members. Studying with them in the workshop are "new" readers: Valerie Rodak, Ronald Batchelor, John Prettyman and Wayne Sasala.

Sue Lancaster Will represent the Readers November 5th in East Stroudsburg, Pa. at the Sixth Annual Oral Reading Festival at East Stroudsburg State Teachers College.
