NINE NEW TEACHERS JOIN STAFF

Nine new instructors have joined the Behrend faculty this fall. All are men, all are interesting and personable, and all make fine additions to the campus.

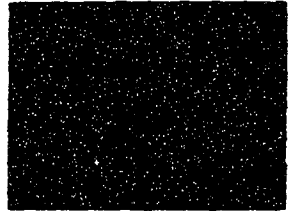

John Grode, whose interests are reading and sports, says he loves Behrend, and went here himself from 1962-1964. Originally from Erie, he graduated from Penn State with a B.S. in Industrial Engineering. He now teaches D.D.T. associate degree students.

Joseph C. Hunt, with a B.S. in Mechanical Engineering, also teaches associate degree students in D.D.T. He graduated from Penn State in 1960, and likes photography and graphology. About Behrend, Hunt says, "I love it."

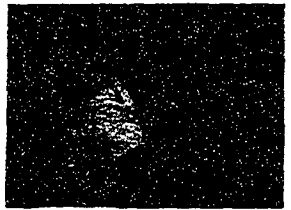

Phillip MarcCorella, originally from New York City, finds Erie "quiet," but he likes Behrend. He received his M.A. in Business from Penn State, and teaches business courses here.

John S. Milosh, also from Penn State, says Erie is "Just another town." He hails from Chicago, and enjoys classical music. He holds an M.A. in engineering and teaches that subject here.

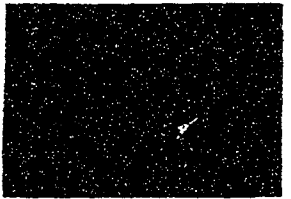

Edward Onorato likes the Behrend Campus, and came here himself for a while. He coaches soccer
