RUB Nears Completion

UNION BUILDING TO SOLVE MANY STUDENT PROBLEMS
by Eileen Bowden

Finishing touches are now being completed on the Reed Union Building, which is scheduled to be opened by the beginning of the Winter Term. This beautifully-designed and well-situated building was built with the student in mind.

It is equipped with two huge lounges, one for fun and frolic, and the other for quiet studying. The "noisy" lounge will be equipped with several new $1500 pool tables, and new ping pong tables, too. Located in this general area (right wing, first floor) is where the SGA suite and the literary clubs' offices are located. The unpopular "bookstore" will also have a new permanent, greatly-enlarged location in the central first floor area.

The arched windows pictured above designate the temporary location of the library. The crowded conditions that exist in the present library will no longer exist, and there will always be plenty of room to study or to do library work.

On the second floor is a new lecture hall built on the order of Room 101, O. B. Building, only larger with more modern ideas built into it. Across the hall from the lecture room is the new, ultra-modern cafeteria with a folding partition, which separates the dorm students' dining section from the commuting students' section. This was done for practical reasons. In the cafeteria area there will also be a snack bar which will have regular daily hours, and will be open to all students.

Space is a word which describes the RUB as there are meeting rooms, practice rooms, and even one room which does not really have any practical use. Dean Lane, on a guided tour through the RUB, summarized, "It's one of the best designed buildings in the Commonwealth"!
