

'BEHRENDITE' IN THE MAKING

by Sandy Nupp

By fall students representing a cross-section of the United States--students from Massachusetts, Virginia, California, and from the great high schools develop a sense of oneness and become true Behrendites. All influences result from achievement of a common goal, exemplification of personal skills, growth of new friendships, or through personal contacts with existing student leaders.

Probably all the influences--encountered especially in campus co-curricular activities--lead to the unity of a once diverse student body.

John Gilwell, student from California, a former student of the University of California, Santa White, and from Pennsylvania, the two students who represent the "new" influences on the campus. They are the students who are the "new" influences on the campus. They are the students who are the "new" influences on the campus. They are the students who are the "new" influences on the campus.

Thus the life of Behrend is a process of growth and development. The life of Behrend is a process of growth and development. The life of Behrend is a process of growth and development. The life of Behrend is a process of growth and development.

The life of Behrend is a process of growth and development. The life of Behrend is a process of growth and development. The life of Behrend is a process of growth and development. The life of Behrend is a process of growth and development.

The life of Behrend is a process of growth and development. The life of Behrend is a process of growth and development. The life of Behrend is a process of growth and development. The life of Behrend is a process of growth and development.

The life of Behrend is a process of growth and development. The life of Behrend is a process of growth and development. The life of Behrend is a process of growth and development. The life of Behrend is a process of growth and development.

The life of Behrend is a process of growth and development. The life of Behrend is a process of growth and development. The life of Behrend is a process of growth and development. The life of Behrend is a process of growth and development.

tions of local businessmen, also shapes fumbling freshmen into responsible business students.

The Athletic department also serves to make "individuals" of our freshman fellows. Especially for the boys, the sense of teamwork required for such sports as soccer, baseball, and basketball greatly encourages a sense of unity. Leagues, tournaments, and other forms of competition also bring out school spirit, while cheerleading provides an excellent chance for girls to participate in total school activities. Intramurals include: bowling, flag football, tennis, basketball, volleyball, wrestling, table tennis, swimming, and softball.

Thus, our students "Behrendite" and the feeling of "oneness" in our body of co-curricular campus activities. The result... be active in our co-curricular activities to find a true meaning of our campus life.

freshmen aren't the only new things on campus this week. Besides the new faces in front of the ROT, there are also a number of very new faculty members.

The Medical department has the greatest number of new recruits as the result of a massive exodus last year. The six new instructors in the department are: Dr. Robert Baughman, Dr. Michael Gitter, Dr. Norman Gehring, Dr. Michael Harwood, Dr. Jeffrey Steinbrink, and Dr. John Wheeler, in addition to the newly returned Dr. ...

Dr. ... has replaced four new Assistant Professors. Dr. Mary Nichols will teach Chemistry; Dr. Leonard Scott, Physics; Dr. Harold Neumann and Dr. ... will teach Engineering; Dr. John ... has also returned to the faculty after a year's absence.

The new Physical Education instructors in the fall are Robert Kautler and Barbara Curcio. Sterling Baker will continue in the History department and taking over the Sociology courses is Frank Samsone. William Lesler is the newest addition to the math department, while Dennis Kovach is starting term as substitute teacher at Behrend.

With the opening of the doors this year, there was created a new administrative post. To fill this position of Residence Community Co-ordinator, Mrs. Betty Frederick was appointed.
