

FROM THE ^{GOE}MIND FROM THE ^{GOE}MIND FROM

Conversation among editors:
"All right, all right, I'll complain about something, but what? Things are OK now, nobody's bothering us. For a change, we don't have any problems."

"We can't print the paper without having any complaints in it. Complain about having nothing to complain about."

So I am, and it's not easy. After all, what's the CUB without one good, vicious complaint? What's wrong with you guys, anyway???????

Why couldn't you start a riot and march on the Publications Office? Then I could moan about how the students don't appreciate our efforts to present the news.

S.G.A. hasn't even been picking on us lately. If only they would have made more of a fuss about all the money we spent. Rats!

We've got our editor back, and a lot of people are pretending they like us again, Oh well, so much for diplomacy.

If this keeps up, I may lose my job as feature editor in charge of complaints. If only people would stop buying the CUB or at least hang Blossom in effigy. Then I could really get mad about something.

It must be because it's the last week of the term and everyone is studying for finals. What a waste, why study when you could be out making trouble and give me something to write about?

At least give me a start for next term by doing something drastic like picking up your garbage in the cafeteria or go to some of the things on campus like Readers Programs and such. Then I could really get on people's nerves. This one's getting on mine.

"All right Blossom, what else can I not complain about??"

"Hey," she answers, "your article is too long. Cut it short."

"Go to..., oh, never mind."
