All concern over the apparent lack of space in the cafeteria for handling an additional 200 students next year is needless. The present facilities are considered adequate to accommodate the increase in resident students for breakfast and lunch (since it is apparently difficult for most to rise in time for these meals anyway.) An ingenious plan has been formulated for the evening meal. This will consist of sectioning off approximately half of the present commuter domain (snacketeria) by the use of a clever room divider and opening (at last) the partition separating the two sections. This will result in seating for about 300 residents (so sorry kids, you'll have to eat in shifts) and reduce the snacketeria chairs to about seventy. Extended meal-times are also planned and the problems will hopefully be solved.

SPOTLIGHT

I then went into the house, and found that while I was out Corvairing, my seven-year old brother had gotten the exact same car in the bottom of a box of Cracker jacks.

REACH-OUT
