Notes On Our Basketballers

by Dom Lamberti: Sports Editor

While the Soccer team is operating in high gear, the Basketball team is preparing for its season opener on Nov. 25 against Ashtabula (away). Coach Marty Malkin announced that 19 eager basketball players have been coming to practice regularly. Of them, 4 are returning from last year's undefeated team. They are Doug Zimmerman, Mike Hook, Eric Obert, and Pete Saunders. The Cubs have found height in Don Williams (6'4"), Gary Paraway (5'5"), and Ron Quasneski (6'5"). The coach has been running the team to get them in shape and will let them have scrimmage games very soon. He described the team as good, fast, hard basketball players who have great ability.

Highlighting the conference will be an address by Mr. Rod MacLeish, Group W Commentator, who will speak on "The Methods of Student Activism," on Monday, October 27.

SERIES SENTIMENT

by FRITZ ANDERSON

Saturday, October 11, was a great day for Baltimore. The Orioles had won the first game of the 1969 World Series. Don Buford hit a leadoff homer to delight the crowd. Three more Oriole runs crossed the plate in the fourth inning, helping to their 4-1 win. Baltimore swept the Minnesota Twins for the American League pennant. Enter the New York Mets, winners of the National League, earned by their beating Atlanta 3 games to 0.

That Saturday was the last game the Mets were to lose. The Mets' express, spearheaded by Jerry Koosman's two-hitter, tied the Series with a 2-1 win. The Mets went ahead two games to one, again on pitching. Gary Gentry, the Mets' rookie, and Nolan Ryan combined for a 5-0 win, giving up only four hits. Tommie Agee and Clendenon hit homers to help the Met cause.

Game four was not decided in regulation time, but the Mets scored in the tenth, and a 2-1 victory was theirs. Tom Seaver pitched ten innings to pick up the win. Now there was one more game to go. The stunned Orioles struck for three runs in the third inning, but the Mets, behind Clendenon and Weis homers, came back for a deciding 5-3 win. The Mets scored the go-ahead runs in the eighth inning.

The Mets were the champions of the baseball world, and another Baltimore team was deprived again of a championship by a New York team. The Mets won on pitching and fielding. Met pitchers gave up only five Oriole runs in the last four games. Tom Agee and Ron Swoboda each saved a game with fantastic catches.

Teamwork also marked the 1969 Mets. Donn Clendenon hit three homers, and all eight of the most-played Mets scored at least one run and collected two hits. The Oriole sluggers, F. Robinson, B. Robinson, Blair, and Buford hit .187, .053, .100, and .100, respectively. Boog Powell managed .263, but failed to collect an RBI. Oriole pitching was good (2.72 ERA) but the Mets came through and won everything. Congratulations, Mets.
