Women Are Inferior

by Randy S. Kinkead

I have long been of the opinion that females are inferior to males. They, naturally because of their prejudice, claim equality. Luckily, the administration has sided with me. That is, the girls have time restrictions and the boys have not.

Are the women concerned with this implication (though to me it's a fact) of inferiority? Certainly not! Their typical comments on the situation read, "There's nothing to do past the curfews," which shows a lack of imagination and/or dull conformity, "If there were longer hours, I'd stay out longer and lose sleep and abuse my lessons," which is demonstrative of self indulgence and immaturity. There are many other comments which all amount to the same conclusion—These girls are conformists, lack will power, (sometimes referred to as "won't power"), have all led sheltered lives, and are in fact INFERIOR.

Those who should be the leaders of the opposition to the dorm hours (as a matter of principal if not of practicality), the Women's Residence Council, are too concerned with planning 1962-style jammys (complete with Bobby Vinton and potato chips) to concern themselves with a "mere" breach of freedom.

If you don't want to stay out past two A.M., the curfew is unnecessary. If you would like to stay out until three or four once (or a hundred times), is it fair of you who don't want new hours to keep a rule, that doesn't affect you, which would result in the punishment of a friend or friends? Logically, it's not fair.

IF this is the reason alone is not sufficient stimulus for action, by you women, through the WRC, then consider this. The University acts "en loco parentis" (in the capacity of your parents). Now, how many of you have "specific" time limits for dates at home? Not many because your parents have confidence in your judgment. The University is degrading you by not showing faith in your judgment. They are saying "These girls are inferior emotionally and are not to be trusted." In short, they know the score. You are inferior, you are proving it by not putting on your guns and fighting for your freedom. You broads are all alike. INFERIOR.

DEAR CHARLY

(Anyone having a question on anything please send your question to Charly Lee, c/o the Publication office, Reed Building, Behrend Campus. All letters will become the property of the CUB and will be eligible for printing.)
Dear Charly:

Could you please explain the process of student disciplinary action in incidents involving civil authorities.

Signed, Want to know committee
Dear SWTKC,

I will refer to a statement made by the Student Committee on University Involvement Civil Law in answering your question.

"It has been the policy of the Behrend Campus Student Affairs Office to assume the responsibility of processing charged students through the present University Judicial system instead of having them processed through the civil system. However, at the present, it should be noted that should a student be charged and convicted of a breach of civil law, he may still receive disciplinary action by the University.

You see, then, that a student has two possible fater, and the latter is not considered double jeopardy under University policy. The said University policy refers to the section in the Senate Policies and Rules for Undergraduate Students entitled "Conduct of Students." Specifically cited sections W-11 which states that all acts of "unethical," "immoral," "dishonest," or "destructive" behavior are subject to disciplinary action, W-16 which states that "cases of alleged student misconduct shall be adjudicated by a student court."

The rules don't say that if the civil authorities process a student that the University trial will be foregone. Also, the authorities release the students into the custody of the University only under the assumption that the University will try them.

To date nothing specific has been stated in the cases of civil authority vs University authority. I feel that soon there will be a long and heated debate over the issue. The students should not shrug their shoulders and say "well this doesn't concern me so why should I care!" Just put yourself in the shoes of someone who has been involved with the law. For example in the town of State College if a University student is arrested, the University sends him a letter informing him that disciplinary action has been taken by the school, without the victim even having a trial.

Another example of overlap or jurisdiction is the W-14 section which states that one student can't register for another. In my mind this is a clear case of fraud and that W-14 shouldn't even be a University rule. It should be left a civil rule.

In almost all the W rules, civil law is written as University law.

The only reason that I can see why the University accepts the responsibility for their students is that dorm students are supposedly under the guidance of the University. In other words, the University is acting as parents would act. But, is this fair to the commuters?

Erie Zoo Gets 'Happy Ending'

University Park, Pa., Jan.—It's off to a new home where the buffalo roam for Penn State's "Happy Ending," only in this case he's going to be the only one—at least for awhile.

The in-resident bison won by Pennsylvania Gov. Raymond P. Shafer in a wager with Kansas Gov. Robert Docking on the outcome of the 1969 Orange Bowl game is headed for the Erie zoo.

But while the scenery may be different, the symbol he stands for will always be the same.

For "Happy Ending" will always remain Pennsylvania's biggest (1,400 pounds) and most fitting testimonial to Penn State's heart-stopping 15-14 last minute victory over Kansas in the Orange Bowl of Miami, New Year's night, nearly 13 months ago.

"The Erie zoo was one of several zoos and individuals who had asked for the buffalo when we first got him," reports David R. Schuckers, director of University relations at Penn State.

"But Governor Shafer felt that Penn State should have him, at least for awhile."

And so, "Happy Ending" made his home here for a year, residing at the University's beef cattle-sheep complex where he gained over 400 pounds and attracted visitors by the droves, especially on Sunday afternoons, to catch a glimpse of Pennsylvania's new pride and joy.

Now the time has come to move the bison. For one thing, the other animals got nervous in the presence of the giant beast. For another, he's taking up room sorely need for the University's valuable herd of beef cattle.

"The Erie zoo was selected because it was the only one which inquired about 'Happy Ending' that didn't already have a bison among its inhabitants," explains Schuckers. "They're making arrangements now to transfer him to the zoo in the next week or so."

With the transfer comes this promise from Dr. Paul Albracht, executive director of the Erie Zoological Society:

"'Happy Ending' will always serve as a constant reminder to the families and children who visit him of Penn State's fine victory. And who knows. There's even a possibility he may get a mate someday."

BULLETIN BORED

The co-editors of the 1970-71 Student Handbook have been appointed by the Publication Board. They are Kathleen Sparks and David Steinhoff. Other staff members are Marcia Hamm, Ann Jorgenson, Patsy Wheatley, Elaine Humme and Richard Barraclough. Any students wishing to work on the handbook is asked to contact Sparks and/or Steinhoff.

Everyone knows that the paperbacks in the bookstore have been there for the past five terms. Don't blame it on the bookstore, because it's not their fault. Blame it on the Lakeport Distributors. They have a monopoly on the distribution of paperbacks in Erie they don't think Behrend is worth it. They won't send a man out to the bookstore to renew our supply of paperbacks.

WALK, DON'T RUN will be presented as a conclusion to the Winter Weekend on Sunday evening, February 8, at 7:30 p.m. The movie stars Gary Grant, Samantha Eggar and Jim Hutton. Here's a synopsis of the story follows.

Gary Grant, an electronics expert arrives in Tokyo during the Olympics. Due to crowded housing conditions he shares part of a small apartment with a young woman. Meantime, a young Olympic team member also moves in. Gary plays cupid, attempting to throw the two together as often as possible.

As a special added attraction, there will be FOUR (4) "count 'em" ROAD RUNNER cartoons.
