

CRAZY CHERYL'S CAMPUS . . .

Cheryl

I want to thank all the people who helped Debbie and I in organizing and decorating for the formal. It was a tremendous project but through our united efforts the evening was a success. I am really grateful to all of you.

I've heard a lot of nice comments from adults concerning the pastcard drive. Nice work guys.

Has anyone besides me noticed all the liberal or radical literature floating around the campus. Oh . . . by the way, where's the S.G.A. ditto machine?

Everyone who attended the after prom knows that Fred Astaire is going to have some tough competition, thanks to the fancy footwork of Mr. Z. and Mr. Gehrein.

There's one lady on campus who is really going to be missed next year, our one and only Dean Seanor. I'm sure all the students here at Behrend wish her the best of luck. F. S. I'm still rading that book.

Finally, Behrend has earned brownie points to join the tri-college monopoly. Were we lacking points or are they laking money?

EDITORIAL POLICY

The editorials appearing in this newspaper will be opinionated and therefore subject to criticism. All letters that are typewritten and submitted to the newspaper staff will be printed with the exception of those that are repetitions or in poor taste. # Scott Addressey YOUTH

The year of 1968 saw an explosion of political awareness among young, educated and concerned people like yourself. Your energies were released on the traditional political process.

That enthusiasm has not been quelled or quieted. The emancipation of political spirit is at times overly dynamic and explosive at the expense of tolerance and reason. Deep concern tends at times to mute reflective consideration.

As student demands become greater, violence increases. Polarization accents differences. Idealism can become tainted with closed-mindedness.

I would not urge inaction on you. I would not ask you to quiet your cries. I would not tell you to dampen your idealism.

I will urge you to listen to other voices. I will ask you to reject violence. I will beg you to accept some realism.

The crises that divide our nation are great burdens on everyone. None of us escapes the seriousness and magnitude of these problems.

No one can or should propose or pretend to present easy solutions.

Burning a building, bombing a factory, stoning a college administrator. These are all easy solutions. Simple answers with drastic consequences.

Just as we cannot condone violence, we will not condemn activisms. The two are vastly different.

Activism emancipates and channels emotion toward change. The activist molds gut reactions into workable solutions.

The violent revolutionary allows emotions to erupt into destruction, physical reactions. This, history tells us, is the quickest way to the suppression of freedom for all.

Nihilistic instincts have always been a sideshow on the stage of change. They must not overcome the rational and realistic approach.

No change comes easily in any society. There is no substitute for devotion and diligent acceptance of hard work.

This nation is divided. Divided by age, sex, color and social strata. The generation gap has grown into a chasm. Polarization leaves no room for moderation.

An intolerable level of intemperance and misunderstanding on all sides, has created a volatile atmosphere. It is wrong. It is leading us to disdain and distrust each other as Americans.

It has come from high and low places. It has come from a great many Americans of varied and strong feelings. This rhetoric has inflamed and created a heavy turbulence of hate, suspicion and mutual disrespect.

These gaps must be closed. The differences must be minimized. The separateness of spirit must be removed. Division must be sealed. Strong bonds of agreement must be molded. The walls that exclude a view of the other side must be brought down by the force of reason.

Divide and conquer! NO! No nation can survive such a strategy. If we allow ourselves to be divided, we will be unable to conquer our problems.

You are prepared intellectually for your first confrontation with the real problems of life on a serious and long-lasting basis. The greatest success I can wish is that you make a commitment to live life to the fullest. A promise to devote all your energy and perseverance to our nation's serious dilemmas.

This nation will be no greater than its people. It can be no more committed than those who participate in its direction.

It is for you to make for yourself a better world, a greater nation, a more equitable system.

The future is yours. Do not fold, spindle or mutilate.

Dave Carr, S.G.A. President-elect.

Possibility of No Caps and Gowns Money To Be Used To Help Peace Candidates

No decision has been made yet to change University policy regarding the wearing of traditional caps and gowns at graduation ceremonies.

A controversy has arisen from efforts of a group of architecture students to persuade seniors graduating in June to forego wearing caps and gowns and to donate the money that would be spent for them to the Peace Commencement Fund, a national student organization collecting money to support peace candidates in next fall's elections.

"Senior class president Sol Solomon is looking into the situation and studying all the facts," said David R. Schuckers, director of University Relations. "He is to make a recommendation on what procedures the senior class would like the University to follow regarding caps and gowns for this June commencement."

The Peace Commencement Fund was recently organized at Yale University, and the Penn State students learned about it through newspaper accounts, according to Jane Hurt, a spokesman for the architecture group.

Petitions now being circulated to get support for the movement and money for the fund will be presented to President Walker. The group has no estimates yet of the number of students supporting the drive.

LOOK what they're serving in the cafeteria these days! How about it Leigh?
