

TOMORROW-MAY DAY AT HIGHACRES

At 3:00 tomorrow afternoon in our beautiful garden overlooking Conyngham Valley, the Theta Sigma Pi Sorority will present their eleventh annual May Day Coronation Ceremony, with the main feature being naturally the crowning of this year's queen by the 1954 queen.

Students, faculty, friends, and neighbors, are invited to view the affair. Refreshments for all will be served by the P.S.U. Auxilliary in the cafeteria immediately following the ceremony. Anyone wishing to tour the campus may do so at his own risk, but the Auxilliary and students will be available to act as guides.

Dances for the program were taught by Mr. Saverio Saullo, a Hazleton High School faculty member, and music will be provided by Mr. Freddie Houser, a noted regional Hammond organ artist. Also taking part in the ceremony besides the Sorority girls are ROTC drill team members who will form the Honor Guard, four members will participate in the Black Hawk Waltz, and one who will be the Herald. The daughters of Mr. Peightal, Mr. DeFina, Mr. Kreckler, Mr. Mattern and Mr. Coyne will act as flower girls.

Dress rehearsal will be held this afternoon from 3 to 5.

AWARDS NOT DISCONTINUED

In answer to a statement published in last week's Collegian concerning scholastic awards, the Music, Language and Biological Science Awards were not discontinued. In the past few years, the advisors of these subjects have felt that no one has so excelled in them to receive consideration. The giving of awards is left to the teacher who knows best how each student reacts to his course, and if he thinks someone has met the best standards this year, then awards will be made.

A PAT ON THE BACK

This center is what the students make it. Everyone's cooperation is needed to make things run smoothly, and this is especially true in our library. At the beginning of this semester, an article in this paper called to the students' attention, the need for them to do their part to make the library useful to everyone. Rules were listed for taking out and returning books both when a library aide is on duty and when one is not.

The results of this announcement have proved that the students at Highacres possess a large amount of college spirit. Students have been making themselves responsible for the books that they take out of the library. Many books taken out while no library aide was on duty, have been signed out properly by the person taking them and have been returned safely and on time. The library belongs to everyone, and you as students have been doing your part to show that you realize it, therefore, the library aides wish to commend you for the way you have used your library this semester. Keep up the co-operation.

CONFERENCE ROOM?

Did you know that we have what is called a conference room at Highacres? It is situated in the basement of the Main building, next to the drawing rooms. It was the former library storeroom. During orientation week, we were delighted to hear that this room, since it contains a large round table, will probably be used by discussion classes, such as Phil., Pol. Sci., and Soc. But the year is drawing to a close and the conference room is still there where we saw it in September, just in case you were wondering.
