NAVY 34 PENN STATE 14

Navy's George Welsh proved too much for the Lions last week-end as the Middies flew to a 34-14 victory at University Park in the annual Homecoming week-end.

With Coaldale's Welsh throwing passes all over the field and setting records while doing so, the Middies overcame an early 7-6 deficit and evened State's record for the season at 2-2.

Lenny Moore's ground game again was stopped cold, but it would take more than Moore to stop the team called "Desire." However, Penn State did score on Navy, the first time it has happened this year.

On Saturday, October 22nd, the Lions play another strong team in West Virginia.

GOING...GOING...

You'd better get your tickets for State's home games, but fast. The Pitt game on November 19th is already sold out, and the Syracuse game on November 5th is almost a sell-out.

A student at a California college had been pestering his father for a '54 auto. On a visit to the campus, the father pointed out that most of the cars in a parking lot were of ancient vintage.

"But, Dad,!" protested the boy, "those cars belong to the faculty."

SOCCER

NUMBER 13!

The Penn State booters romped to a record-tying win over Syracuse, and thereby extended their winning streak to thirteen straight.

The booters tied their own record, set last year, and gave strong evidence of another undefeated season.

Prior to this game, the booters were held to six goals, as compared to their opponent's three. Last year the State squad had twelve against the opponent's two. Strong competition early in the season justifies these low scores.

The Bucknell Bisons are the Lions opposition in the next regularly scheduled game.

TODAY A HERO, TOMORROW...?

Do you remember reading about Johnny O'Brien, when he scored the winning touchdown in the last minute of play, as Notre Dame beat Army in 1928? He was an "unknown" then, and although a hero, his status still didn't change.

The question, whether Fred Trust will go down in State's history as a forgotten hero? takes the same pattern. He's the "unknown" who scored the winning goal against West Chester in the last minutes as the Penn State booters kept intact their winning streak. Time will tell!
