

QUESTION OF THE WEEK

What Do You Think?

What would you do if someone gave you a zythum is the question this roving reporter asked the following students. Here are their answers...

Sandra Coxes: "I'd give it back."

Jean Reed: "I'd throw it in the fish pond."

James Dino: "I'd put it in the Smithsonian Instution."

James Chudy: "I'd throw it away."

Andrew Gozjack: "I'd probably drop dead."

George Neast: "I'd buy a barrel of beer."

Helen Novarnik: "I'd put it in my hope chest."

A ndrew Yuresckb: "I'd sell it."

Daniel Miernicki: "I'd go to the doctor to see if there is a cure for it."

June Switch: "I'd give it to Mr. Steel to dissect."

Arnold Klein: "I'd play it."

Hillel Sakenik: "I'd refinish it."

Gerald Boyle: "I'd plant it to see if it grows."

Adele Reytar: "I'd give it to Mr. Mattern to analyze in the Chem lab."

(What do you think cont'd.)

George Aton: "I'd probably eat it."

Methody Sirkat: "I'd keep it for a pet."

John Probert: "I'd kill it."

Theresa Bobowski: "I'd step on it before it spreads."

Sheldon Coxes: "I'd put it in my safety deposit box."

Oh no you wouldn't! You would probably drink it because zythum is a kind of beer, specifically the beer of ancient Egypt or the beer of the nothern peoples.

CHRISTMAS PARTY HELD

The Women's Auxillary of the Pennsylvania State University Center held a Christmas party on Monday, December 5th in the lounge of the Main Building at Highacres. The party followed a business meeting. Mrs. Leah Kostenbauder, president of the Auxillary, presided over the affair. Mr. Preston D. Peightal gave a book review on "The Year of Decision", by Bernard DeVoto.

Jean Reed sang Silent Night in German, and I Ain't Getting Nothing for Christmas. Santa Claus (portrayed by Jean Reed) distributed gifts.

Refreshments were served.

NOTICES

A Handbook, which is available to the students enrolled in the School of Home Economics; can be obtained from Mr. Noble. This Handbook contains information on the numerous fields of Home Economics one can enter into upon graduation from college.
