LET'S TAKE THE NOISE OUT OF THE LIBRARY

As most of the students at Highacres have noticed, the school is somewhat overcrowded this year. We have run short of classrooms, dining space, and available studying rooms. Due largely to this overcrowded condition, a large number of students have taken their work to the library. This studying in the library has resulted in a tremendous increase in noise in the library building which hinders studying especially for students who must use the library for reference work. Let's take the noise out of the library now!!

A schedule of vacant rooms has been posted on the bulletin board, showing the rooms that are vacant each period of each school day. If students desire to study together they should consult this 'vacant room' schedule and pick one of the vacant rooms rather than using the library and causing so much confusion for students who really need the use of the library.

It has also been brought to the attention of students and faculty members that some of the noise in the library (especially in the reading room) is being caused by students 'chatting'. If you have something to discuss with one of your friends, take the discussion to the Rec Hall, the lounge, or one of the empty rooms, don't distract or interrupt people in the library who are trying to concentrate on their work.

A little cooperation on the part of each student here at Highacres will go a long way in helping to remedy this noise situation in the library and at the same time help to return the library to its proper position on the campus.

BOWLING

The Number 13 seemed to have a shattering effect in the Penn State Bowling League this past Sunday.

Here is the way things shape up after the 13th. week of bowling at the Playhouse Alleys: The Speech team was dropped from first place to hold a tie for second with Engineering; One point separates the first and fourth place teams; .4 points separates the two top individual average leaders; a new high team single total has been set; and six men have crashed into the "500 series" department.

The red-hot Accounting team took over first place by bumping Speech in three games. Jim Koren, with a high, 3-game series of 555, climaxed by a sizzling 222, sparked the Accounting squad while Andy Gozjack, in a good supporting role, had a 500 triple.
