

Humor

Conversation between two co-eds - "Certainly was a cute fellow you were with. Where'd he hail from?"

"A 1956 Convertible."

A boss vacationing in Mexico received a short note from his staff: "Hope you are enjoying your vacation, we are."

During one of those interminable teen-age telephone calls, a mother heard her daughter say, "Just a minute, let me change ears."

During a discussion in my high school English class, the question of choosing colleges was brought up.
One bright girl contributed her bit: "Well, she said, "first you've got to decide whether you want to go to a co-educational school, or an educational one!!!"

A pretty co-ed was tripping across the campus, when she noticed a good-looking athlete approaching with an interesting look in his eye.
"Look here," he said, "You don't know me, but I've seen you around a lot.

"Yes, I've noticed you, too," she replied demurely.

"Well, are you doing anything special tonight?" faltered the youth.

Humor (con't)

"Oh, no," she said excitedly, "What did you have in mind?"

"I thought maybe you'd be free to sit with out baby, while my wife and I go to a movie."

SCIENTIFIC TERMS RAFFLE STUDENTS

Students aspiring to be future physicists or chemists have to increase their vocabularies in order to understand the subjects and pass the required tests. Troublesome terms baffle many students, and when they are included in tests, some of them appear as these:

- Copper- Policeman
- Zinc-Place to wash hands
- Nitrate-Special price for telephone calls
- Nitride-Trip through Lovers' Lane after 8 pm
- Silicon-Foolish prisoner
- Oxide-Leather from a steer
- Beaker-Long nose
- Liter-Head of parade
- Gram-Nickname for Grandmother
- Atom-First man on earth
- Meter-First step in love affair
- Graphite-Argument with a Math teacher
- Barium-Procedure after a person dies.
