JOHN CLAVICLE KILLED

By

R. Warman

A Highacres student, John Clavicle, was fatally injured today when an automobile driven by Joseph Phalange struck him as he was walking up the Highacres road leading to the campus.

Several eye-witnesses testified that Clavicle was walking near the middle of the road when Phalange came around the bend near the drill field. Clavicle tried to move to the side of the road but his way was inadvertently blocked by the three students with whom he was walking abreast. When asked, some of the witnesses replied that they thought the car was driven at excessive speed. Surviving relatives are.....

Not a very pleasant description, is it? Yet any day now it could be a reality. The faculty and Traffic Committee have expressed their concern over the "jay-walking" condition that exists and are determined to alleviate it. A new set of rules has been devised whereby individuals will have to pay a fine for "walking" violations. It is getting pretty bad when red tape rules start to replace common sense.

GREAT BOOKS COURSE

by

Martha Preputnik

Dr. Brice Harris, professor of English literature and head of the literature department at the Pennsylvania State University, spoke at the first meeting of the semester for the Great Literature Club of Hazleton. Dr. Harris' lecture consisted of a dissertation on Chaucer's "Canterbury Tales."

The meeting was held in the Conference Room of Main Building October 5 at 7:45. Mr. Andrew Kafka, assistant professor of English Composition and Literature at Highacres, served as the moderator of the discussion which followed the lecture.

The Great Literature Club of Hazleton has scheduled numerous interesting lectures for the coming semester. Students who would like to attend these lectures may obtain information on them from Mr. Kafka.

HALLOWEEN HOP

by

Jacqueline Kessel

The Hazleton Eagles was the site of the first school dance of the current academic year. Friday evening found over one hundred students enjoying themselves in an informal atmosphere of jeans and khakis.

Gabe Flint and his talented tonsorial five provided music of all varieties, from rockenroll to waltztime and back again. It is rumored that even some members of the faculty, determined not to be outdone by the students, joined in and put their students to shame in the art of tripping the light fantastic.

All things considered, the dance, as the initial offering of this years class, can be termed a resounding success.
