

K.Q. Bishop and friend

While staring into the bottom of a bottle (milk) one day, I saw the truth. I immediately scribbled it down, and here it is, recorded for posterity. The world is a lie. Nobody ever tells the truth about anything, anytime, even when they try to (especially when they try to).

When people try to tell the truth they lie more because there is no truth. Everything in your text books could be called lies but is not, because a lie implies an "untruth", and there is no truth, so there can't be any untruths. Man is miserable because he searches for truth, and there is no truth anyway, so he can't find it. As a matter of fact, there isn't anything anyway, but I explained that in my last article. If you give up searching for truth, you must give up searching for life also. In fact, you must give up entirely. If you do, you would be perfectly happy, if happiness existed, but it doesn't, so you can never be happy.

THE FIRST AND FOREMOST RULE FOR "HAPPY"

LIVING

"Happy" is inclosed in quotation marks because it does not exist. In fact, all words should be inclosed in quotation marks because no words exist.

Never do anything with anybody else at the same time they are doing it with you. For instance, Wars are caused by people trying to do something with somebody else at the same time they are doing it with them.

Well, that's all the horseplay for now friends. Tune in to this same spot in two weeks and follow the trials and tribulations of old K.Q. as he attempts to reason with an unreasonable world in his unending battle to stay out of an institution.

Please don't complain about the grammar. It's amazing that I can write at all in this jacket.

Now down to some serious business. Congratulations are in order to the administration for the fine assistance they are giving to American business enterprises. I doubt anyone could determine the real value they have been to the publishing industry by having students purchase more books than are necessary in some courses. And as a by-product to this they are also helping to relieve the overcrowded situation in our Colleges and Universities today. By having the students spend all their money in one semester, they make it difficult for them to continue the following semester. I say hats-off and congratulations to the administration on their fine work.
