

AGRICULTURAL AND HOME ECONOMICS MEET AT HIGHACRES

Thirty-one representatives of the Pennsylvania State University met Friday, October 24, at Highacres, to review and coordinate the many educational programs and services offered by the University in this area.

Participants included personnel from the Agricultural and Home Economics Extension and the General Extension staffs in the six-county area.

Among the items discussed were the increasing demand for specialized training in technical and business fields, increased activity in rural and urban 4-H Club programs and new instructional programs and services including classes in accounting and record keeping for business men and farmers, investments for individuals, parliamentary law, and community leadership.

Added emphasis was placed on the planning of talks in careers in agrobusiness field for urban and rural young people.

Frank C. Kostos, Administrative head of the Hazelton Campus and Henry Herring, Administrative head of the Pottsville Center were co-hosts for the meeting.

POOL TODAY

Student body! In the last edition of the Collegian you may have noticed a warning, "Join a car pool and save parking space."

We again strongly urge you to heed this warning. Hurry because the winter months will soon be with us.

Remember the blizzards of last winter? According to the farmer's almanac, the winter of '58-59 will be even worse than last year's—this means an even less limited parking space than last year.

Help alleviate the winter parking problem by FORMING CAR POOLS TODAY!

BOOK REVIEW

The following books can all be found in the Highacres Library.

The History of American Funeral Directing by Robert W. Habenstein and William M. Lamers. Milwaukee: Bulfinch Printers Inc., 1955

The History of American Funeral Directing is the first full-length portrait of the funeral directing profession.

While the story is full of profound human and great reader interest, it is at the same time carefully told and amply documented. The book is rich in examples and illustrations.

The history is written in a style that will appeal to both the general reader and the serious historian. It traces the evolution of the funeral director as we know him today. The book records the progress of lay services to the dead and to the bereaved in Western civilization from the early Egyptians up to the present time. It reviews at some length funeral beliefs and practices through the ages.

The book details the history of funeral goods and equipment such as caskets, coffins, vehicles, costumes, shrouds, and mourning clothes.

One hundred years from now, The History of American Funeral Directing will be the key reference work on how America buried her dead up to mid-twentieth century.

The Theory and Practice of FENCING by Julio Martinez Castello. New York: Scribner,

This book can teach a beginner to fence and can also prove helpful to the advanced student. Some of the many important phases of fencing covered here are: fundamental positions, preliminary actions, attacks, parries and returns, analysis of the foil bout, how to fence against a left-handed fencer, engagements, feints, compound attacks and compound returns, and time cuts.
