

Meet <sup>her</sup> Faculty

In conjunction with the national observance of St. Paddy's day, the faculty interview for this issue is, naturally, Irish.

"Students do not do enough reading or else their reading is in only one field; consequently, they are not getting the full, well-rounded education that is essential to all college students," so states Mrs. Mary Ferry, our cute chief librarian.

Mrs. Ferry lives in West Hazleton with her husband Paul and her two young children, Susanne and Philip Lynn.

Mrs. Ferry attended St. Gabriel's parochial schools until her senior year when she transferred to McAdoo High School from where she graduated. Her college education started at Kutztown State Teacher's college. A transfer to Molenburg college in Allentown followed— there she received her degree. Mrs. Ferry's post graduate work in Library Science was done at Temple University in Philadelphia.

Her first job was that of a Senior English teacher at McAdoo High where she also worked as librarian. Then she accepted a position as a substitute teacher in West Hazleton for over a year. Mrs. Ferry has held the position of librarian at Highacres for a little over three years.

While in college, Mrs. Ferry indulged in basketball among other things. She also had the distinction of winning a position of the Queen's court at Kutztown State Teacher's college.

Today, Mrs. Ferry is an active member in the American Library Association as well as the Pennsylvania Library Association.

Her future plans include sending her two children to Penn State and growing old and mellow with her husband and her books.

HAPPY
ST. PATRICK'S
DAY!
