I have a short-wave set, and because I understand Russian I frequently tune in on Radio Moscow. Yesterday I heard the Moscow Tomato Juice Program. The announcer came on and said, "Moscow Tomato Juice comes in seven delicious flavors. All red. We're not asking you to try it. We're telling you."

On the same program there was a news announcement. "Ivan Iko, Leningrad's No. 1 athlete," the announcer said, "just broke all existing track records for the 300-mile dash, the 400-mile dash, the 500-mile dash. He made these records on flat roads, hilly roads, and over our highest range of mountains. He made these records without food or water for three days. However, Ivan's performance was in vain. He was captured and brought back to Leningrad."
