RUSSIAN ECONOMICS LECTURE FRIDAY NITE

Dr. Jan S. Prybyla, associate professor of economics at the Pennsylvania State University, will speak at the Hazleton Campus of the University on Friday, May 3, on "Economic Life in the Soviet Union."

His lecture, scheduled for 8 p. m. in The Student Union Bldg. is one of the Faculty Artists' Series arranged by the University.

Social Security numbers will replace student numbers on University records of students this Spring, according to Robert G. Bernreuter, dean of admissions.

Bernreuter said that an interim period will be necessary when both new and old numbers will be used to avoid issuing new identification cards to upperclassmen. The registrar's records, however, will note social security number, he said.

Any student who does not have a social security number at the time of Spring term registration has to apply for one immediately, or his registration will be canceled.

"The new system will be valuable to both the student and the University," Bernreuter said. "The majority of students work during or after their college careers anyway, so this will be a convenience to them."

Bernreuter also said that the University wants to get away from using its own unique system and employ one that will help it in other ways than student identification.

"We are trying to demonstrate to the College Entrance Examination Board that universities like ours will use a common number such as a social security one for student identification. They might then consider reporting the social security number with the student's Scholastic Aptitude Test Scores," he said.

If the CEEB consents, this would avoid hiring extra University clerks to match applications and test scores which come in separately to the dean of admissions office. Machines could be used for the matching process to complete it more quickly.

Another reason Bernreuter gave for the change is that more and more duplicate names are appearing on University records. When an employer writes requesting a student's college history, he does not know the student's former matriculation number to aid in identifying him. A common number like the Social Security one would help avoid mistakes.
