PSU Urges HELP For Student Loans

The University has joined with other Pennsylvania colleges and universities through the Pennsylvania Committee for Higher Education Loan Plan (HELP) to urge passage of Amendment 1-A to the State Constitution at November elections.

President Walker pointed out, in announcing the University's decision to aid the HELP program, that even though loans totalling nearly half a million dollars are made by Penn State yearly, more than a thousand applications for loans, adding up to more than a million dollars, are turned down yearly for lack of funds.

"Rising costs of education and the declining opportunities for students to earn enough to put themselves through college are two important reasons more students are asking for loans," the President said. "Our experience with loans to students has been good and we would like to encourage more young men and women to borrow to further their education but the money is simply not available."

Through Amendment 1-A, the HELP Committee hopes that more banks and other lending agencies will provide loan money at low rates and more liberal repayment terms by being guaranteed the loans through a special State fund.

The HELP Committee believes that the public needs to be better informed on the Amendment to assure its passage.

THINK BEFORE YOU DRINK

Pennsylvania's newest drinking law concerning minors went into effect recently.

The act, passed by the 1963 General Assembly, makes it illegal for minors to attempt to purchase, consume, possess or transport alcohol, liquor or malt or brewed beverages.

The law provides for a penalty from $25 to $100 fine or 30 days in jail or both.

ART PROFS SPEAK

Three faculty members of the College of Arts and Architecture at the Pennsylvania State University will conduct a painting demonstration and discussion at the Hazleton Campus of the University on Friday.

It is one of a series arranged by the university to stimulate student interest in the areas of art, music, drama, and literature.

Conducting the program was George S. Zoretich, professor of art; and Bruce R. Shobaken and Stuart H. Frost, both assistant professors of art.

The trio in their presentation activated a discussion between the audience and the instructors for the sake of understanding painting as a creative art. They will demonstrate on a personal statement of expression rather than a "how to do it" approach.

Professor Zoretich is a graduate of the university with a bachelor of science and master of arts degrees and has served on the faculty since 1946, initially on the staff of the DuBois Campus. He works primarily with oils but had done work in watercolor, lithography, and sculpture.

Professor Shobaken, named to the faculty in 1958, is a graduate of the University of Minnesota where he received his master of fine arts degree. He studied

First Time Highacres Hosts Conference

A fall conference of the Organization of Student Government Associations will be held at the Hazleton Highacres Campus November 1 and 2. Representatives from the thirteen other commonwealth campuses will participate in meetings that are planned for this time.

The O.S.G.A. endeavors to improve the activities of Campuses of the University and to promote inter-Campus activities. The Hazleton campus has seen much of this work materialized in the inter-campus bowling and chess games of last year.

The campus has been chosen to host this group as part of the progress which provides each commonwealth campus with this opportunity.

Since the inauguration of this program, only two other campuses have held this honor—Altoona and the Behrens campuses. Previously, all such O.S.G.A. functions were held at the University Park.

The activities planned for this weekend will include, along with O.S.G.A. meetings, guest speakers, a buffet dinner and Harvester's Dance Friday, and a Saturday afternoon luncheon in honor of our guests.

Along with the Highacres S.G.A., the Hospitality Committee of the newly formed Student Union Board was instrumental in scheduling the plans for this conference.

All students are encouraged and welcome to attend the Harvester's Dance and to fraternize with visiting Penn Staters.

print-making in France on a Fulbright fellowship and taught drawing and painting at the University of Illinois.

Professor Frost is also a Penn State graduate and has studied at the Skowhegan School of Painting and Sculpture, Brooklyn Museum Paintig School, and New York University.

He has worked on fresco projects, including the famed Land-Grand Mural in Old Main at Penn State, with Henry Varnum Poor and has also done works in oils and watercolor, and drawings.

All have exhibited widely and have been represented in leading galleries.
