

POLL TAKEN HERE

In a recent poll of the students here at Highacres, the question, "What would you like written on your tombstone?" was asked. There were many replies. Some choice ones are:

John Matyas: "1946 to 1965"

George Hooper: "May he rest in peace - he deserves it."

Tony Grecco: "Peace at last!!"

Ken Hughes: "Hear layz a frust ratd English magor."

Anna Mae Cherenyokk: "This girl died at 97 - shot by a jealous wife."

Mary Soltis: "Us Taryton smokers would rather fight than switch!"

Cheryl Fedullo: "This is one place Mr. _____ wouldn't find me."

Rose Pecci: "That's a dumb question. I don't even want a tombstone."

REINCARNATION

A happily married couple - a jealous wife and husband who believed in reincarnation. When the husband died the wife tried to communicate with him in the spirit world.

"Are you happy?" she asked.

"Happier than I ever was before," he replied. "The pastures are greener, and its indeed a beautiful world. The weaker sex are the most beautiful creatures you ever saw! Wistful eyes that speak of love; sleek bodies; and well rounded forms."

"OH DEAR!" she expostulated.

"With so much temptation around I am afraid that you might do something shameful. I hope I can join you in heaven soon."

"Heaven! Who the hell said anything about heaven? I'm a bull in Montana."
