POETRY

Is there a Byron, Shelley, or Keats in your crowd? It could be you! You'll never know unless you enter the National Poetry Press's Spring Competition. Any student attending a junior or senior college is eligible to submit his verse. Although shorter works are preferred by the judges, because of space limitations, all works may be submitted. The deadline is November 5 and all works should be typed or printed on a separate sheet. It must bear the name and home address of the student as well as the college the student attends. All entries must be mailed to

UNICEF

On Friday, Oct. 27, 1967 the sorority girls will be collecting for UNICEF. We are trying to exceed last year's total of $36.00. So please give. Help feed the poor children of the world.

LEFTIES

A plea for help has been issued by the left-handed students who maintain that it is difficult for them to write on desks which were designed for right-handed students. The student affairs department of this newspaper suggests that the administration conduct an inventory of the sinistral desks in each room. If there are not at least two in each room, steps should be taken to secure these desks.

It is only fair that the lefties have the same opportunities as the rest of the students.

BELLE LETTRES

New officers have been named to the Belle Lettres Society. They are: John Gallagher--President, Joseph Skawinski--Vice-President, Linda Spalone--Secretary, Lia Ciotola--Treasurer, James Gallagher--Publicity Chairman, and Mike Hager Photojournalist.

President John Gallagher reported that there are several new members, however, he would like to see more interest in the club. Anyone still interested may join by giving a copy of his schedule to John Gallagher or Joseph Skawinski. A meeting will be held sometime in the very near future. The Belle Lettres Society is under the advisorship of Professor Andrew Kafka.
