

The Things That Are Left Behind

People, tear yourself from your daily grind,
 And stop and listen as I speak my mind,
 Stop believin' the things you were once told,
 Stop living your ways, cause they're old,
 Cause there's one thing you will find,
 That those things, they are left behind.
 Criticize our ways, tear us apart,
 Put us down as though you have no heart,
 Fill us with fear; fill us with hate,
 Tear us from the life we associate,
 And don't put in a word that is kind,
 For those things, they are left behind.
 If you comb the face of the earth,
 You will find a complete rebirth,
 Not of sin and not of filth,
 But a closer look will reveal a wealth of old things now refined,
 For those things, they are left behind.

Egli Looks Forward to New Post

Penn State basketball coach, John Egli, is looking forward to the challenge of a new position when he ends his 14 year college coaching career at the close of the current season.

Egli will assume the duties of supervisor of sports programs for the University's 19 Commonwealth Campuses. And he says it will be a welcome change after 25 years in the basketball business.

Egli is well acquainted with the Commonwealth Campus system, having spent two years at the University's DuBois Campus before becoming an assistant coach at Penn State in 1949. While at DuBois, he was a physical education instructor, head basketball coach, and director of the varsity and intramural sports programs.

Egli is very anxious to start his new job because he believes a significant part of the future at Penn State's athletic program should begin at the Commonwealth Campus level. He realizes that each year more students are beginning their college education at the centers. This means that a well-coordinated athletic program is essential to prepare student-athletes to integrate into the varsity program when they move to the main campus at University Park.

Film Festival

The film festival is flying high at Highacres. Some of the best films produced are rented and shown to the students through the sponsorship of Belles-Lettres. Shown on Feb. 9 was the "Guns of Navarone" starring Gregory Peck, David Niven and Anthony Quinn.

Carl Foreman has brought to the screen a stunning film of unflagging excitement and suspense in the story of Allied Commandos and Greek Resistance Fighters in a desperate raid on a German-Held Aegen Sea Island.

Sparking the film are the guns of Navarone themselves—German guns embedded high upon and deep within the island cliffs of Navarone, preventing Allied ships from using a vital sea channel. They cannot be destroyed by land, sea or air attacks...Therefore, Allied Commandos must move in on a suicidal sabotage attempt! The film was a hit with all who attended. See you at the next movie!
