

SOCIAL ACTIVITIES

There is only one more month of school left. During Nov. three dances are scheduled. The first one is Nov. 8 with Mel Wynn playing. Students here, at Highacres may buy their tickets in advance. The second dance of this term is on Nov. 22. The West Gate Five will be booked. The last dance of this term is the Thanksgiving Day Dance which will be held Wednesday evening, Nov. 27, from 9-12. The Hue Main Society will provide the music for this dance.

So far this has been a very successful term. The students here have enthusiastically supported all social activities. If any student has suggestions for other activities please contact Kathleen or Eileen Gibson, who will run a student poll to determine the receptiveness of the student body to new ideas.

Intramural football competition has started, and the Potent One's are currently on top with a 3-0 record. The Loners are in second place at 1-1. Holding down the bottom of the standings are the Hard Corps and Roadrunners. Both of these teams have yet to taste victory.

The Potent One's narrowly defeated the Hard Corps by a 10-6 margin. This is indicative of the keen competition throughout the league. Any one of the four teams has the ability to come off with a win in any given game.

John Humenick holds a commanding lead in the chess tournament. His total of 5 points represents a perfect record to date. In second place is John Kostic with 3 points. be donated to various hospitals and homes. Many of the projects were sent to the Lutheran Home and a thank you card for the gifts was received by the Sorority. The remaining articles will be sent to orphanages and hospitals as Christmas presents from the Sorority.

On Thursday, Halloween 1968 the members of the sorority collected money from all students for the annual UNICEF Drive.

CROWDED CLASSES?

If anyone happens to see Dr. Win walking around the campus with an enormous stack of blue books under his arm, you can bet that they aren't from his Chem. 30 class. The fact is that with only three pupils in his class, Dr. Win isn't too busy correcting test papers. However, as the students will tell you, the size of the class certainly hasn't affected the quality of the organic chemistry exams, they're just as hard as ever. The three just cannot see how such a small class can be so difficult and present so many large problems. The benefits of having few pupils in a class are obvious. The students are beginning to refer to Dr. Win as their private tutor. One disadvantage of the small class is that it is extremely difficult for any of the three to cut class. Any teacher is bound to notice if a third of his class is missing. Be careful when you refer to this class. Call it small, but not puny. Look at it this way, a lot of compact cars are on the market this year. So, Penn State, not to be undone, produced a compact chemistry class.

YEA, TEAM!

Something new has been added to the long list of extracurricular activities offered by Highacres. As of the coming season, our basketball team will play from victory to victory while being cheered on by the newly-formed cheerleading squad. The members of the squad are: Sue Williams, Lorraine Skuntz, Mary Ellen Kapuschinsky, Sally Haydock, Marie Gendimenico, Sandy James, Jane Ammon, Mary Borascius, Eileen Gibson and Annette Bowers. These girls are really working hard to prepare for the basketball season and urge that all students come to the games and help them cheer the team to victory.
