by Christie Tito

Filling the office of former SGA President, Warren Faust, Mark Denke has promised to uphold the fine traditions set forth by SGA. Mark has appointed Rolly Loomis to act as vice-president until the next general election during the fifth week of the term. There they will elect a representative, also.

Along with compiling their annual budget, SGA has made some new revisions in the Student Union Board. The President of SGA formerly served as chairman of the Student Union Board and vice-president of SGA was president of the SUB. Heads of committees used to be appointed by SGA president. Now, while still a part of SGA, the SUB is its own organization. Jack Yatsko is the present president of SUB. Anyone is invited to attend their meetings.

THE CROSS

by Jack Yatsko

A few days ago, Highacres played host to the best coffee house it has ever had. "Banbury Cross" was the featured folk group. Jim Dougher, the warm-up entertainment provided excellent entertainment with traditional folk songs. "Banbury Cross" was, indeed, the high point of the evening. The vocals, arrangements, and musicianship were unsurpassed by any of our other coffee-house entertainers. Their rendition of Bob Dylan's "All Alone in the Watchtower" was beautiful. If we're lucky, they will grace us with another performance before the year is out.

WRITE ON !

The Students for a Creative Society are completing plans for the spring publication of New Horizons Literary Magazine. Four types of creative work will be published. Prose, in the form of short stories and essays, are needed. Also, in the realm of the written word, poetry will be published. Illustrations will be used to frame the poetry and to further explain the prose. Photographs of the campus and of nature will complete the creative picture.

The poetry and prose should be typed with the author's name in the upper corner. Sample illustrations should be pen and ink on white paper. Any photographer may submit pictures of the campus. For more information contact Linda Gallagher or Dale Walck, co-editors, or the following members of the editorial board: Donna Baver, Debbie Berger, John Busher, Bill Michael, Maria J. Rovito or Don Serfass.

The Hazleton Choraliers are looking for male voices. They will be conducting a fifties concert and need people to help build the set. Contact Miriam Howells, West Hazleton High School, for more information.

Some Napoleonic scholars on campus were asked if anyone at all from a small town (or island) could successfully resolve to make good. "Of Corsican," was the reply. Several English students have promised to pursue their studies with greater enthusiasm. For example, they will find Thornton wilder than ever, and Irving taking second place only to Kipling as an indoor sport. Biology students will avoid faking an attack by Trypanosoma Gambiense (or Rhodensiense) in class. Aspiring chemists will not bite off more than they can masticate when they encounter molar units. Psychology students will do their part in alleviating the energy crisis by getting more and better mileage to their Freud while remaining Jung at heart. But Penn Staters all over the Commonwealth will skip out on classes to cultivate their love lives--thereby putting the heart before the course.

A certain Collegian writer resolves to follow the exhortation of Michael Tillson Thomas: "C" sharp and "B" natural. That is, if the writer is not first punished for articles such as this one by being carted away to an asylum. For a fool who is punny is soon carted.
